Procedural vote hijacks crime bill

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House on Thursday dismissed a sweeping anti-crime bill in a stinging setback to President Clinton.

Shaken Democratic leaders, brainstorming for hours with Clinton's aides after the vote, said they would try to resurrect it next week.

"I worked my heart out and did everything I could," Clinton said in reaction to the vote. "On this day, the NRA (National Rifle Association) and the Republican leadership had their way."

Clinton immediately scheduled a Friday trip to Minneapolis for an appearance before a convention of the 200,000-member National Association of Police Organizations in an effort to revive the bill. And he called a morning Cabinet meeting, hoping to ignite some momentum for his health care legislation.

An unlikely coalition of Republicans, gun-control opponents and black lawmakers prevailed 225-210 in a parliamentary move that prevented the House from actually voting on the crime bill itself.

House Speaker Thomas Foley, emerging from a four-hour meeting with White House officials after the vote, said late Thursday night. "We hope next week we'll be voting on the crime bill."

Foley said he planned to discuss with committee leaders "how the bill will come up again."

The legislation would have provided $33.2 billion for an additional 100,000 police officers, prisons, crime-prevention measures and an especially controversial ban on assault-style firearms.

Moments after the House rejected a "rule" which would have allowed for a yes-or-no vote on the bill itself, Clinton went before reporters. "They have failed the American people," he said.

The president's supporters included 147 Republicans and 58 Democrats' deserters. Voting for the bill were 198 Democrats, 11 Republicans and 1 independent. While lambasting the gun lobby and Republicans, Clinton seemed to defend black lawmakers whose opposition was based on capital punishment concerns.

Strike halts play

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Even though cracks appeared in the owners' solidarity, players finished their games Thursday, packed their bags and prepared for a strike that could wipe out what's left of an extraordinary season.

"We hope it's not a long strike," said Tony Gwynn, one of several stars enjoying a big year.

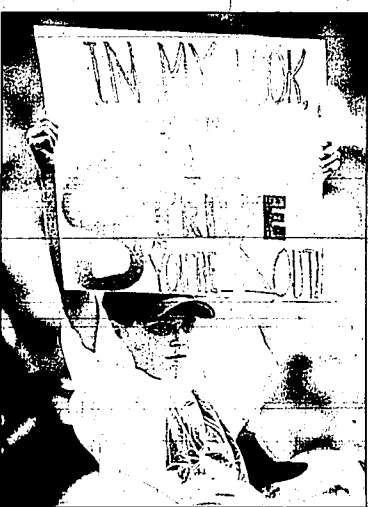

So did President Clinton, who urged the sides to get back together as quickly as possible.

New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner and Baltimore Orioles owner Peter Angelos doubted management's bargaining strategy, and Colorado Rockies controlling owner Jerry McMorris said a deal could be reached without a strike, but — the major stumbling block, Cincinnati Reds owner Marge Schott questioned the experience of Richard Ravitch, the owners' negotiator.

But union head Donald Fehr said nothing has changed. That baseball's eighth work stoppage since 1972 — its first mid-season walkout since 1985 — would start after Thursday night's games.

The sides didn't talk formally Thursday, instead appearing jointly on television. Fehr and Ravitch sat together Thursday night on CNN's "Larry King Live," but seemed as far apart as ever on the issues.

"There are no talks planned or scheduled at this point," Fehr said, saying players were "resigned and resentful." Players say they are striking because they fear owners will impose a salary cap after the season.

Ravitch said there was no indication a settlement would come quickly, leaving the possibility that the World Series — which was played through two world wars — won't be taken place for the first time since 1904.

Lightning sparks series of 15 fires in central Idaho

The Associated Press

As helicopters continued dumping thousands of gallons of water on the moving front of central Idaho's raging Corral Fire Thursday, fire bosses scrambled initially at attack crews to challenge 15 new fires ignited by a roaring lightning storm.

The storm brought some rain to the region of the Payette National Forest that has been a flame for over a week, but spokeswoman Heidi Bigler Cole said it was not enough moisture to outweigh the damage caused by the new round of lightning.

Meanwhile, residents in two remote areas remained on notice for evacuation should the 30,000-acre Corral Fire erupt again and begin racing in their direction.

After merging on Tuesday night with a smaller fire burning off its northwest flank, the fire was still behaving so erratically that fire bosses said there was no way to attack it at the moment.

"Even the foot of the fire has been active," Cole said. "Things are so active, the fire is cruising so fast, even if we had all the troops in the world it wouldn't help us. We're not going to put firefighters' lives in danger, and the way it's acting we couldn't do it without putting firefighters' lives in danger."

Additional crews could be available soon, however. The National Interagency Fire Center in Boise reported only one new major fire in the previous 24 hours while eight others were declared contained. That left just over 21,000 firefighters on the lines of 26-major fires in seven western states.

Soldiers from an engineering battalion based at Fort Lewis, Wash., began arriving in central Idaho Thursday to reinforce the nearly 500 firefighters committed to the Corral Fire. But fire managers said they

Woodstock under tight control

The Associated Press

SAUGERTIES, N.Y. — The first Woodstock '94 pilgrims arrived Thursday to a scene far different from the late, great love fest of 1969.

Metal detectors. Wire fences. Police patrolling the perimeter. Police dogs sniffing for drugs. Hundreds of security guards in orange Peace Patrol T-shirts. Special Woodstock currency to buy food and souvenirs. This is not your father's Woodstock. The strict rules on what can be brought in — no bottles, food, booze, metal tent stakes — have left some fans fearful they'll be spending the weekend in the Gulag Woodstock, the Woodstockeade, Woodstalg 17.

"We're the only communist country left in the world. Look at this," said Charlie Brown of Jacksonville, Fla., pointing at metal detectors set up in a field near a parking lot for ticket holders in Cocksacke, about 20 miles from Saugerties. Fans were required to pass through the detectors before they could board school buses to the concert site.

"Big Brother has taken over

Looking for tickets and a parking place, Brian McDonald, left, and Matt Furman, both of Pleasanton, Calif., walk the fence line around the Woodstock '94 grounds Thursday.

Woodstock," Brown said. The first acts go on at midday today, with the bigger names like Joe Cocker, Melissa Etheridge, Metallica, Aerosmith, Spin Doctors, Bob Dylan and Peter Dinklage performing Saturday or Sunday.

Surrounding the former farm are miles of wire fences, some covered with painted posters.

Wanted: $480,000 in unpaid fines

By Sean L. McCarthy Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If you were thinking about letting that traffic ticket go unpaid, think again.

After discovering at least $480,000 in uncollected traffic and misdemeanor fines — some dating back to 1987 — the 5th Judicial District is cracking down to ensure that crime still doesn't pay in Twin Falls County.

The county didn't know exactly how much money it could be raising until a recent quarterly meeting of the state's trial court administrators, said Linda Wright, administrator for the 5th Judicial District.

Court officials were encouraged at that meeting to step-up their collection efforts, Wright said Wednesday. These efforts have been stymied, in part, because manpower in county law enforcement has decreased over the past seven years, she said.

Wright said the crackdown should begin next week.

Since 1987, more than $400,000 in misdemeanor penalties have gone unpaid.

That's at least $40,000 that could be available for county budgeting. About 10 percent from each county fine collected in the county goes to the city, the lawbreaker lives in.

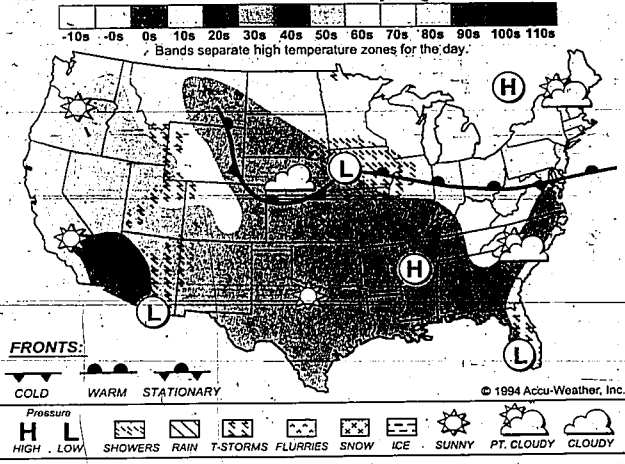

The fees at stake are those levied for crimes ranging from expired driver's licenses, domestic battery, illegal consumption of alcohol and carrying a concealed weapon.

Extended forecast: Southern Idaho - Sunday through Tuesday mostly sunny days and fair at night. Widely scattered afternoon and evening thundershowers mainly east part. Continued hot. Lows 50s to the mid-60s. Highs upper 80s to around 100 degrees.

Northern Utah and Nevada:
Utah - Partly cloudy with a few afternoon thundershowers today and Saturday. Highs lower to mid-90s. Lows 50s to 62. The ultraviolet index forecast is 7, a high exposure level.

Elko County - Partly cloudy east with scattered afternoon and evening showers and thundershowers today. Elsewhere partly cloudy with widely scattered showers and thundershowers. Highs 85 to 97. Lows mainly in the 50s. Saturday partly cloudy with a chance of afternoon and evening showers and thundershowers. Highs in the 90s.

Weather summary
A southwest flow of moist, unstable air worked its way into Idaho Thursday, generating strong thundershowers in central and southern sections.

The rest of the state was mostly sunny.

Clear skies over the Magic Valley in the morning were cloudy by mid-afternoon, bringing scattered showers. Mountain Home was among points reporting thundershowers, storms or rain.

Temperatures at 3 p.m. ranged from the upper 70s to the mid-90s. Winds were light and variable except near thundershowers, where gusts up to 25 mph were recorded.

The highest temperature in the state Thursday was 101 degrees at Emmett. Stanley reported the lowest at 32 degrees. That reading was also the lowest reported in the nation.

Elsewhere in the nation Thursday, the highest temperature was 121 degrees at Death Valley, Calif.

Central states, gulf coast receive another soaking

The Associated Press

A slow-moving storm system hovered over the central United States Thursday, spawning thundershowers and some heavy rain.

Scattered thundershowers rumbled through Montana into Colorado and a severe thundershowers watch was issued for parts of southern Montana. Showers also hit the West.

A record .01 inch of rain fell in usually dry Bakersfield, Calif. The previous record for the date was a trace amount in 1971.

Thundershowers gathered around the Gulf Coast, from Florida to the Southwest deserts. Another strip of storms stretched from Illinois into southern New England.

House delays health bill debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — As House Democratic leaders conceded they may have to delay health reform debate for more than a week, a bipartisan group offered a rival bill Thursday that neither raises taxes nor requires employers to pay for workers' insurance.

On the other hand, the bipartisan bill would not come close to achieving universal coverage — even by President Clinton's newly broadened definition.

A sponsor, Rep. J. Roy Rowland, D-Ga., said it would approach "90 percent or a little bit better" coverage by 2004. That means only 5 percent more Americans would be covered through the reforms than are already covered without them — and at least 26 million Americans would remain without insurance.

Regardless of what it accomplishes, the bill comes at an inopportune time for Democratic leaders. They are struggling to get votes for their much broader bill and hampered by delays in getting financial analyses of their own bill and its rivals.

House Majority Leader Richard

Gephardt's bill would require most employers to pay 80 percent of their workers' insurance and would create a new section of Medicare to cover the poor, the uninsured and those temporarily unemployed.

The bipartisan bill seeks to expand coverage through insurance reforms, subsidies for the poorest, an expansion of community health centers and tax changes. Authors say they estimated it would cost $140 billion over five years, and $340 billion over 10 years.

Subsidies for poor Americans would begin for those whose incomes put them at the poverty line and gradually would cover those with earnings up to twice the poverty level. Pregnant women and children whose income are as much as 240 percent of the poverty level would be eligible.

Supporters said the plan would be paid for largely by reducing the rate of growth of Medicare and Medicaid.

Meanwhile, debate continued in the Senate Thursday, but without votes. Republicans promised to keep the Senate from voting on health reform today, too.

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., a foe of the health plan, made an emotional plea to his colleagues to "stop this train right now and get off. ... Let's not destroy the quality of health care in this country by passing a bill along party lines."

Details of the bill, authored primarily by Sen. Tim Wirth, D-Colo., and Rep. Michael Bilirakis, R-Fla., came out after a morning of rumors about delays in the House debate.

Although debate had been scheduled to begin Monday, it was called off there would be a delay of one week and possibly longer. It was unclear whether lawmakers would be allowed to return home to campaign during the delay, or whether the House would stay in session to debate other pending legislation.

House Speaker Thomas Foley told reporters the schedule depended on the Congressional Budget Office's ability to complete analyses of the bill. He denied a shortage of votes was causing the problems.

Fires

will undergo another three days of training before moving to the fire lines.

A team of fire behavior specialists said that under the worst conditions — continued hot temperatures, extremely low humidity and high winds — flames could eventually engulf 425,000 acres in central Idaho. That would be nearly 700 square miles or over half the size of the state of Rhode Island.

Several hundred residents in the communities of Burdoff and Seesech were told to be prepared to evacuate. There are about 100 structures in those two areas, which were still under six miles from the fire's northeastern face.

But some were not following the advice.

"The dog, cat and I will get in the water or we'll be roasted," said Andy Smith of Seesech. "This is my home. I have too much stuff to walk off and leave."

Crews have been stationed at Burdoff Hot Springs and at the Howard Ranch on the main Salmon, which is still over five miles away from the fire's northern flank, to protect structures in those areas. The fire began about 20 miles south of the river.

Nearby McCall, land managers on the 19,000-acre Blackwell fire complex advised residents in the developed Payette Lake area that lines between them and the fire's western flank were finally secure. Nearly 1,000 firefighters were still committed to that blaze, which continued to the north and east away from the lake.

In the Boise National Forest to the south, the flames from the 13,000-acre Idaho City complex were checked to some extent by a heavy inversion after racing away from hundreds of firefighters a day earlier.

charges of littering or trespassing.

Under the old system, individuals had two weeks to pay off the fine. A court warning would be issued for those not paid in that time. If a person hadn't paid his or her fine within four weeks, the court would notify the local prosecutor.

The prosecutor then would draw up an arrest warrant, Wright said.

But those misdemeanor warrants usually remained on a list alongside those of other criminals to be sought by sheriff's deputies.

"Our $55 fine is not tops on their priority list," she said.

Especially, she said, when law officials didn't have lists of addresses to track down the offenders. That will be corrected under the new fine-collection system.

As before, individuals will have a four-week grace period to pay their fines. At the end of those four weeks, however, the names of individuals who have not paid their fines will be printed in the newspaper.

Wright hopes that may encourage more people to pay their tickets. She said local police officers might start knocking on offenders' doors, notifying them that they were "on your arrest" or you could pay this $300 fine."

That scenario may not happen anytime soon, but Wright's effort does have the support of the county's two top law enforcers.

Twin Falls County Prosecuting Attorney G. Richard Bevan said county residents still need to know that they cannot go unpunished if they break the law.

"It's important ... that people know they mean business," Bevan said Wednesday. "We're behind them."

His backing comes at a time when county law officials are asking the commissioners for beefed-up budgets. Bevan says he needs two new full-time lawyers and one legal secretary to keep up with the increasing caseload in the prosecutor's office.

Twin Falls County Sheriff Wayne Tousey also is asking for more county dollars, and he said his support will depend primarily on how much money his department gets for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

But Tousey said Wednesday that he will devote one part-time deputy to help with the court's paperwork in tracking down deadbeats.

He said he has been trying, albeit unsuccessfully, to implement a more efficient and structured system for dispatching arrest warrants since he was elected sheriff in 1992.

Crime

May lost a firearms ban vote in the House by just two votes, called House Speaker Thomas Foley ahead for real safety and genuine security."

"We Americans want precisely the opposite of what politicians offered them ...," said Tanya K. Metaksa, the NRA's chief lobbyist. "We want prisons, not pork, police, not empty promises, crime fighters, not social workers."

There were indications the House might recess before returning to the crime bill or taking up health legislation. Clinton ridiculed the notion, insisting that Congress stay in session until it can pass a crime bill.

"The health care is not going to take a vacation either," he said, a pointed reference to the other legislation that has been a top priority for Clinton and Democratic congressional leaders. Clinton has been struggling to bring health care to a vote in the House, too.

The president said he found it galling the crime bill was brushed aside on a "procedural trick."

Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., one of the authors of the assault weapons ban, said passing a crime bill early was still a possibility. "If the American people really voice their concerns."

U.S. prepared to block Cuba exodus

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Coast Guard is prepared to put more ships in the Caribbean rapidly in response to any mass migration from Cuba, the State Department said Thursday.

Press officer David Johnson said the Coast Guard will play a central role in "interdicting and rescuing any influx of refugees in the Straits of Florida."

Johnson gave no details but Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Inter-American Affairs, said Wednesday the Pentagon could quadruple its 12-vessel patrol in 36 hours if needed.

At the Pentagon, spokesman Dennis Boxx said 12 U.S. Navy ships are deployed off Haiti and the southern Caribbean on anti-narcotics duty. It was not clear whether Boxx and Torricelli were referring to the same 12 vessels.

Boxx suggested the vessels off Haiti and in the southern Caribbean could be redeployed off Cuba if the need arises but only if they can be spared. Another possibility is using ships deployed off the U.S. East Coast, he said.

Administration officials have been updating contingency plans for coping with a mass influx of Cubans since President Fidel Castro warned of that possibility a week ago. In 1980, 125,000 Cubans fled to the United States in the Mariel boat lift.

Cuba accuses the United States of putting restrictions on legal emigration while doing nothing to deter Cubans from fleeing the country without authorization.

Over the past two weeks, three Cuban vessels carrying a total of 153 passengers have been seized by Cubans seeking to flee to the United States.

The incidents have led to some violence and Cuba has asked for early discussions with U.S. officials to resolve the issue. But the Clinton administration has shown no interest.

Following the latest incident, involving a Navy vessel, U.S. officials detained a military mechanic, Leonel Macias Gonzalez, after he and 25 companions arrived at Key West, Fla., on Wednesday.

Macias Gonzalez, 19, was being held at the local county jail.

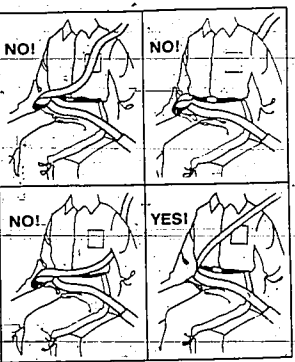

At the State Department, Johnson said there have been prosecutions in the past related to hijackings originating in Cuba, but he was aware of none that were successful.

Reno noted that no accused Cuban has ever been returned to his homeland.

Pentagon 'goofs' cost taxpayers money

WASHINGTON — A sampling of payments to nine Pentagon contractors found goofs costing taxpayers more than $22,000 a day, congressional investigators said Thursday.

"The sloppy accounting is sort of staggering," said Senate Governmental Affairs Committee Chairman John Glenn. "The Pentagon does not seem to have control over the checks it writes." One contractor had been owed more than $5 million for over a year, according to a General Accounting Office report released by Glenn, D-Ohio.

The nine contractors together were owed $87.6 million — money the government has a duty to pay, plus a late payment penalty of 7 percent interest.

The late-pay penalties for the nine companies in the GAO spot-check could cost the Defense Department about $16,800 a day. Overpayments to the same nine companies cost the government an additional $5,800 a day, the report said.

Glenn said the investigation now will expand to include all payments made to the top 100 defense contractors.

Clinton names judge as new counsel

WASHINGTON — President Clinton Thursday named federal appeals Judge Abner Mikva as White House counsel.

He will replace Democratic veteran Lloyd Cutler and assume the administration's handling of Whitewater and other legal problems confronting Clinton.

Clinton saluted Mikva for giving up a lifetime appointment to the federal bench to join the White House staff. And he paid tribute to Cutler, who took over the counsel's office five months ago after Bernard Nussbaum was forced out because of his controversial handling of Whitewater matters.

Cutler, 76, and Mikva, 68, are the type of political and legal veterans Clinton has sought to steady his relatively inexperienced staff.

Sarokin wins Senate OK for court seat

WASHINGTON — New Jersey Judge H. Lee Sarokin won Senate Judiciary Committee approval Thursday to sit on the court that once removed him from a case for criticizing the tobacco industry.

By a 12-5 vote, Sarokin's nomination to the U.S. 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals was sent to the full Senate, where Republican opponents said debate would be contentious.

In 1992, that court removed Sarokin from the case of a woman who blamed the cigarette industry for her father's death after he called the industry "the king of concealment and disinformation." Sarokin's comments in the tobacco case and other decisions in his 15 years as a federal district judge have caused some to charge he is a judicial activist who tries to legislate from the bench.

Police said the robbers made off with $20 in cash, a $30 personal stereo and a $95 watch.

Episcopal bishop's son accuses priest

WASHINGTON — The son of the Episcopal bishop of Washington is accusing a priest of sexually abusing him for 12 years while offering assurances that "God will forgive you."

With his father and mother standing behind him at a news conference Thursday, Jeffrey Haines said he was raised to trust the church but "I have been betrayed."

He said his memory of the molestation, which he said continued until he was 20, returned only last year while he was undergoing therapy. He will be 35 next month.

The lawsuit was filed Wednesday in Asheville, N.C. against J. Fautlon Hodge, an Episcopal priest who is retired after serving churches in Rutherford and St. Mary's in Ashe County, N.C.

New endangered species plan offers extra security

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department, in a move to defend some of the criticism of the Endangered Species Act, assured landowners Thursday their property won't be placed at further risk if they agree to a formal species protection plan.

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt said he hoped the new policy will show that the federal law protecting endangered animal and plant species is flexible and should be supported.

Congress has been debating whether to drastically rewrite the law, arguing that too often it protects species at the severe economic and social expense of human beings. The law also has become the focus of a campaign to protect property rights against government intrusion.

The Interior Department announced a new policy that any private party or group agreeing to protect endangered species through a Habitat Conservation Plan will be assured no additional property will be taken or costs incurred through the life of the plan.

"We're telling landowners that a deal is a deal," said Babbitt at a news conference.

Babbitt has been a strong proponent of dealing with endangered species issues by entering into agreements with private parties for broad protection of a species habitat, instead of protecting species individually wherever they are found.

The department has been negotiating more than 130 so-called Habitat Conservation Plans around the country. Often a stumbling block in negotiations is the fear that the government will make new demands if the species continues in danger — after an agreement has been made, officials said.

The department's new policy will provide legal assurance that the government will seek no additional funds, or make any additional financial demands on the parties involving the formal conservation plan for the life of the program.

Habitat Conservation Plan agreements can vary in length, but most run 20 to 30 years, officials said. The agreement normally calls on private parties to set aside areas for protection. In return, the government will allow commercial development of other areas, even though the protected species might be found there.

Rick Holley, president of Plum Creek Timber Co., which is planning to participate in a habitat protection program covering 170,000 acres in the Northwest, said the new Interior policy is "a major first step" in making the Endangered Species Act workable.

"We'll know where the ground rules are," said Holley, whose company operates on more than 2 million private acres of timber forest that are home to endangered Northern Spotted Owl.

During the life of a Habitat Conservation Plan, Babbitt said the government still will have available a variety of mitigation techniques to assure that a species is not irreparably harmed. But it will not ask for more land from private participants.

"It doesn't mean we're walking away from it," he said.

Babbitt said that the "deal is a deal" promise is only the first of a number of proposals the department plans to explore and won't require major changes to the law.

Habitat conservation agreements are designed for large landowners or groups. Babbitt said some programs aimed at easing the concerns of small landowners likely will be unveiled next month.

Unlisted may not mean-unreachable

NEW YORK (AP) — When it comes to phone numbers, unlisted might no longer mean unreachable.

Nynex Corp. is testing a service that for the first time would allow callers to leave taped messages for people who prefer to keep their numbers off the books.

People who call directory assistance and are told the number is unlisted will then hear a recorded voice giving them the option of leaving a message.

Customers with unlisted numbers will have the option of refusing all incoming messages.

After a free, three-month trial run, Nynex plans to charge the person leaving the message $1.

House votes to make Social Security independent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Moving to insulate Social Security from partisan politics and restore the public's waning confidence in the troubled New Deal program, the House voted Thursday to make the agency independent.

The legislation, approved by a vote of 431 to 0, also will force thousands of drug addicts and alcoholics off Social Security's disability rolls with no guarantee of treatment and ends unpermitted cash payments to as many as 250,000 substance abusers nationwide.

The bill goes to President Clinton, who is expected to sign it.

Lawmakers believe separating Social Security from the Department of Health and Human Services will strengthen its leadership, insulate the $325 billion domestic program from partisan politics, and rebuild faith in a retirement system that if not changed will run out of money by 2029.

"This bill takes the Social Security Administration out of the basement of the Department of Health and Human Services, where it has been lost in the bureaucratic shuffle," said Rep. Jim Bunning of Kentucky, the senior Republican on the Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security.

"It emancipates the Social Security Administration from the bonds of politics and insulates it against the gale winds of presidential posturing, bureaucratic infighting and budgetary games," he said.

Social Security becomes independent March 31, 1995, and will be run by a commissioner and overseen by a seven-member bipartisan advisory board. The commissioner serves for six years and can be removed only for wrongdoing.

The agency also will be allowed to take its budget request directly to Congress, without first having to send it through the White House Office of Management and Budget.

Lawmakers believe the change will allow the agency to fight for the resources and workforce needed to run a program that sends monthly checks to one in four American families and records the wages of 135 million workers.

Social Security has had 12 commissioners in the past 16 years and has undergone six reorganizations or realignments since 1975.

Rep. Andy Jacobs, D-Ind., chairman of the Social Security subcommittee, has said the "revolving-door" leadership and upheavals have made it tough for the agency to focus on its long-range mission as the Baby Boom generation ages, adding to "mounting demands."

The agency lost one-fifth of its staff during the 1980s, at a time when growing numbers of Americans were seeking disability benefits. Jacobs says it now lacks the resources to do the simplest to the most complex tasks.

Some taxpayers, as a result, have been inconvenienced by busy signals on the agency's phones and long waits for help in its network of 1,300 field offices. Others have suffered severe hardship, including ill and injured workers who lost their homes, went on welfare, or died while waiting for their disability claims to be decided.

Social Security's disability programs also have been wracked with allegations of fraud and abuse by an exploding number of immigrants, drug addicts, alcoholics and disabled children on the rolls.

The legislation tightens up the rules for substance abusers, limiting their cash benefits to 36 months.

The clock would not start ticking for substance abusers who had worked and paid into the Social Security trust funds until they had entered treatment.

But for addicts who hadn't paid into trust funds and collected Supplemental Security Income — a welfare program for the low-income disabled and elderly — benefits would run out after 36 months regardless of whether they had received treatment.

Congressional investigators have found that some addicts have used their monthly checks to drink and drug themselves to death at taxpayer expense.

Critics have called the program "revenue sharing for addicts," and an estimated 250,000 substance abusers are on the rolls, although some may have other disabilities. Under the law, their cash benefits would be paid to a responsible third party.

The changes are expected to save taxpayers $808 million over five years.

Democratic leaders criticize White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Illinois Democratic Chairman Gary LaPaille is biting his tongue, remembering 12 long years of Republicans in the White House.

"I will always support what this president wants of us in the party," he says. "But..."

The Colorado Democratic chairman, Howard Gell, reacts much the same way when asked to assess the White House political operation, after the decision to support Democratic National Committee Chairman David Wilhelm's authority and the former California Rep. Tony Coelho's senior party post.

The White House ordered Wilhelm to add Coelho less than a week after telling Wilhelm it had no problems with his work.

"I guess I wouldn't have done it quite that way," Gell said Thursday. After a long pause, "But I'm not going to be critical of the White House."

The move has angered and rattled state Democratic leaders, many of whom viewed Wilhelm as the only senior member of the Clinton political team who was keeping an unwavering focus on the fall elections. On Thursday, for example, Wilhelm delivered $1 million to the House Democratic campaign committee, the final installment of his $2 million commitment to House candidates.

Some of the state chairmen and national committee members have reacted with such anger to the move that the party is likely to cancel a September meeting planned for Washington. Some state chairmen had previously said they would prefer to stay home focusing on elections. Now, in addition, party leaders fear an embarrassing rift with the White House two months before the elections.

This week's White House-ordered shakeup at the national party reassured many Democrats in Congress who thought the party was not listening enough to them.

While Wilhelm will stay on as chairman through the elections, White House chief of staff Leon Panetta, with President Clinton's blessing, gave Coelho a broad mandate to delve into the unprecedented step of running someone against Clinton's pick.

A senior party official, speaking on condition of anonymity, predicted the chairmen would calm down and that wouldn't happen, but said the White House had underestimated Wilhelm's support.

Jim Brady, the Louisiana Democratic chairman and head of the state chairs' association, said "it would be counterproductive" for Democrats to channel their anger at Wilhelm's treatment into any effort to undermine Clinton.

Still, he said, "This whole process could have been handled a lot better and the White House needs to know that."

State party leaders were not consulted about the shakeup, and said it was handled in a way that was grossly unfair to Wilhelm, one of Clinton's most loyal backers.

"What really is unfortunate is to have the people at the White House refusing to do any self-reflection on themselves and instead wanting to blame the DNC chairman for their Whitewater and health care problems," said LaPaille. "Some of these people ought to look in the mirror in the morning and ask themselves what role they have played or failed to play in putting the president in the serious difficulty he is now in."

Residents support uranium cleanup plan

FORD, Wash. (AP) — Residents of this rural Stevens County town support a plan to pay for cleanup of a uranium mill by importing waste from other uranium mills, a forum was told.

"We live here and it's our problem. It's our health and our children's future," said Ann Keim, one of five Ford residents who spent eight years negotiating a cleanup that would give the community inspection and veto power over any waste shipment.

Military bomber force gets lift from compromise defense bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The military's bomber force gets a significant lift from the $263.8 billion compromise defense bill put together by House and Senate negotiators.

Details of the plan made public Thursday show lawmakers anxious to protect the fleet from cuts and to keep alive the possibility of building more B-2 Stealth bombers.

The legislation requires final votes in the House and Senate and President Clinton's signature before becoming law. Lawmakers said they hoped Congress could send the measure to the president next week.

The bill rejects Clinton administration plans to cut the bomber force from 180 to 107 and also increases funding for "smart" bombs. "We feel that the administration has not thought through their bomber program carefully," said Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga.

House and Senate negotiators fought bitterly over the B-2, with House members insisting that Congress should stand by its 1992 decision to build no more than the 20 B-2s already ordered, for $44.4 billion. The Senate, supported by Northrop Grumman Corp., which builds the B-2 in Southern California, sought $150 million to keep the specialized subcontractors of the airplane going.

In the end, the negotiators agreed to provide $25 million to study the nation's bomber needs and $100 million to "preserve core capabilities." At the defense secretary's discretion, some of that money could go to B-2 subcontractors or toward the development of a new bomber.

Both sides claimed victory.

"I believe that this course of action should ensure that we will meet our bomber requirements without making a future purchase of B-2s," said Rep. Ronald DeLuca, D-Calif., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee and a staunch B-2 foe.

Nunn said the amendment does what the Senate wanted. If the government orders more Stealth bombers, they will cost substantially less as a result of the decision to keep key subcontractors going, he said.

The agreement, while representing only a tiny fraction of the overall defense budget, sets the stage for fierce debate next year, should the Clinton administration change its position and decide to ask for more B-2s. Clinton's long-term defense plan, the so-called Bottom-Up Review, says that 107 bombers would be enough to meet future military threats.

Justices restore black district

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court restored Louisiana's second majority-black congressional district Thursday and said it can be used for this year's election.

The high court, granting an emergency request by Louisiana and Justice Department officials, lifted an order that had eliminated the district.

The emergency request had been filed with Justice Antonin Scalia last week. He referred it to the full court. The vote was 8-1. Scalia said the request should be denied.

A three-judge federal court in Shreveport, La., had ruled that the district was drawn in a way that discriminated against some voters. But today's order set aside the effect of that ruling while state and federal officials pursue a formal Supreme Court appeal.

O.J. undergoes surgery

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson underwent minor surgery involving a lymph node Thursday, then was returned to jail.

The exact nature of the operation was not disclosed. But defense attorney Robert Shapiro disclosed on June 17, the day of Simpson's arrest, that the former football star had an enlarged lymph node in his armpit.

Swollen lymph nodes in the armpit, neck or groin can indicate the presence of a wide range of viral or bacterial infections, or more serious diseases such as AIDS, cancer or Hodgkin's disease.

To find out, doctors often perform a biopsy, in which a piece of tissue is removed for examination under a microscope. In some cases, they remove the entire lymph node and some of the surrounding nodes.

Six sheriff's officers escorted Simpson on the trip to Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. He was in one of three unmarked sedans that arrived at the hospital before dawn.

Research vessel strikes reef off Keys

MIAMI — An environmental-research ship ran aground on a coral reef in a federally protected marine sanctuary off the Florida Keys and was leaking fuel Thursday from two punctured tanks.

Oil stretched three-quarters of a mile from the 176-foot Columbus Iselin and was spreading west and parallel to shore, said Alyson Simmons, spokeswoman for the Florida Keys National Marine Sanctuary. The ship was taking on a considerable amount of water, she said.

About one-third of the ship was touching bottom, and two fuel tanks holding No. 2 marine diesel were broken; Chief Warrant Officer Dan Waldschmidt said.

Florida teen to testify in murder case

MONTICELLO, Fla. — The youngest of four teenagers accused of killing a British tourist pleaded guilty Thursday to a lesser charge and agreed to testify against the others.

Cedric Green, 14, pleaded guilty as a juvenile to one count of accessory after the fact. He has been free since November, when Circuit Judge F.E. Steinmeyer ruled there wasn't enough evidence against him.

Green's lawyer, Greg Cummings, told Steinmeyer the plea agreement was in the best interest of Green, who was 13 at the time of the shooting.

The attorney said Green would testify against the three others.

Eastern forests feel effects of pollution

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Trees in the biggest forest in the eastern United States appear to be dying at three times the natural rate, probably because of pollution, studies show.

The largest and most majestic trees in the forest, some of them more than 300 years old, are being hit the hardest, said Orie L. Loucks, an ecosystem scientist at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio.

"It's a huge problem," he said Thursday. "We are losing unique and irreplaceable older forests."

Loucks is studying what's called the mixed mesophytic forest, which stretches from Ohio through West Virginia and Kentucky and into Tennessee.

Actress' doctors overprescribe drugs

LOS ANGELES — Three doctors who wrote Elizabeth Taylor 1,000 prescriptions for painkillers and other drugs reportedly received state reprimands for trying to hide the doses by falsifying patient records.

The action by the Medical Board of California settles accusations made in 1990 by the state attorney general's office that the doctors had overprescribed controlled, addictive medicines for Miss Taylor, the Los Angeles Times reported Thursday.

The attorney general alleged that from 1983 to 1988, the doctors wrote Miss Taylor prescriptions for 28 controlled drugs, including sleeping pills, painkillers and tranquilizers.

Abortion foes stand by support of 'justifiable homicide'

The Associated Press

Henry Felisone says the three FBI agents who came to his door were brief and polite.

"They asked me about Paul Hill, and I told them I didn't know anything," says the New York City electronics technician-turned-preacher.

Hill is the fervent abortion opponent accused in last month's slayings of Dr. John Bayard Britton and his escort outside a Pensacola, Fla., abortion clinic.

Felisone is among 30 anti-abortion activists who signed a petition Hill had circulated, starkly declaring deadly force justified in defense of the unborn.

Not surprisingly, the signers are now the targets of an FBI inquiry, a congressional hearing set for next week and the vilification of abortion foes and supporters alike. Yet they remain steadfast and mostly unrepentant.

"My feelings haven't changed one bit," said Donald Spitz, a longtime abortion opponent in Chesapeake, Va.

"I believe if an abortionist walking into the abortion mill to kill babies is killed by force, it's justifiable homicide," Spitz said in a telephone interview. "The anti-abortion groups who condemn Hill are cowards who are condemning the babies."

The statement Hill passed around and mailed out over several months said, in part: "We proclaim that whatever force is legitimate to defend the life of a born child is legitimate to defend the life of an unborn child."

It further stated that the first shooting death of an abortionist, that of Dr. David Gunn in March 1993, also in Pensacola, was "justifiable provided it was carried out for the purpose of defending the lives of unborn children."

But Spitz and others who put their names to the statement insist they themselves are no threat.

"I've been telling people it's a statement of belief rather than an endorsement," said Michael Dudge, a Wichita, Kan., activist. "I would never consider doing anything like that myself."

The reassurances are scant comfort to the pro-choice movement. Its members recall Hill used similar language in recent months as he made the rounds of television talk shows and print interviews to promote his view that killing doctors who abort fetuses is justifiable.

A number of the signers were in Mississippi this week with the American Coalition of Life Activists, a new group whose protests are aimed at running off the state's only registered abortion doctor.

Among them was Andrew Burnett of Portland, Ore., who said he signed Hill's statement as a matter of principle.

Burnett, the Life Ministries magazine recently described how Hill and other activists circumvented pro-choice groups to learn the identity of the doctor who would replace Gunn at the Pensacola abortion clinic, then tracked his movements.

That doctor was Britton, killed July 29.

At this week's Mississippi protests, coalition leaders required protesters to sign pledges of nonviolence.

"Do we look like terrorists?" Roy McMillan, head of the Jackson-based Christian Action Group and a signer of Hill's statement, asked as he demonstrated outside a Gulfport clinic.

Burnett

McMillan

"Maybe we look confrontational, like Dr. (Martin Luther) King. He was willing to make things uncomfortable for society."

Hill debated his position at an April meeting of anti-abortion groups in Chicago — and by some accounts split the conference into two camps, for and against violence.

There's a clear and present threat to many doctors. People who say they believe in lethal force are roaming around," said Eleanor Smeal, president of the Feminist Majority Foundation, which trains abortion clinic workers how to deal with protesters.

Smeal and other pro-choice activists are demanding action against the "justifiable homicide" adherents. FBI agents have visited the abortion clinic workers how to deal with protesters.

FBI agents have visited the abortion clinic workers how to deal with protesters.

clinics specifically in towns where the signers live.

Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., has scheduled a hearing before the House Subcommittee on Crime and Criminal Justice next week.

The Justice Department should investigate anti-abortion groups that advocate violence in the same manner that they investigated the Ku Klux Klan in the 1960s," Schumer said. "If there is collusion between these groups to instill terror and do violent acts, they should be prosecuted."

Those who signed Hill's petition stoutly insist there is no conspiracy. They say Hill intended the statement as a fund-raising instrument in support of Michael Griffin, charged and later convicted in Gunn's murder.

Many of the signers interviewed by The Associated Press this week say they've never met Hill.

Most of the names are anti-abortion activists well-known in their local communities, whose past activities range from publishing anti-abortion tracts to assaults on clinics.

Michael Bray, a Bowie, Md., minister convicted of conspiracy and other charges in the 1985 bombings of six abortion clinics, is on the list. So is the Rev. David Trosch, an Alabama priest who prints a cartoon on his personal letterhead that shows an abortion doctor about to be shot in the operating room.

Also on the list is Dave Leach, a Des Moines, Iowa, music store owner who publishes a modestly circulated monthly newsletter on abortion.

"Somehow I got on his list, and he asked if I would allow my name to be added," Leach said. "If you'll look at how carefully crafted the sentences are, the logic is irrefutable. As distressing as the conclusion is, I could not justify turning him down."

Astounding remark raises new doubts about Williams

Give J.D. Williams this: He says what's on his mind.

But the Democratic state auditor's admission in a Times-News interview last week that he hired a former aide because he's a fellow Mormon and needed a job was, quite simply, astonishing.

Fred Martin, who is now actively campaigning for Republican auditor candidate Ralph Gines, worked in Williams' office until January of last year. His job was cut after (but ostensibly not because) he blew the whistle on Williams' alleged use of public employees and facilities in his unsuccessful congressional campaign of 1992.

After looking into Martin's complaint, Ada County Prosecutor Greg Bower lambasted Williams but declined to prosecute, because he said there wasn't enough evidence.

Now Williams has said Martin got on his payroll in 1991 not because he was the right man, but because he went to the right church.

That statement calls into question not only Williams' ethics, but his judgment as well.

Hiring people because of religious affiliation certainly isn't new — or even particularly unusual in public life. But it's illegal, and it's a political dynamite in a state about evenly divided between Mormons and non-Mormons.

If Williams doesn't know that, he has no business keeping the public's trust — much less his money.

This is, after all, a man who Bower's investigation showed paid a consultant $16,000 in state money to do work that wasn't the state's business. And two former high school interns told The Times-News this week that Williams asked them to dig up information on Mike Crapo, Williams' 1992 election opponent, when they were working in the auditor's office that year.

Martin says that during the 1992 campaign, the state auditor's office was transformed into a campaign headquarters, with staffers working for Williams when they were supposed to be auditing for the government, and using government equipment to prepare political materials.

Williams says he doesn't remember telling the interns to dig up dirt on Crapo, and he has repeatedly denied using the auditor's office for political purposes. But he doesn't sound entirely convincing.

"There were some things done, and when I'd see it, I'd say, 'Make sure you make this up,'" he said in a recent interview, referring to employees using state time for campaign work. "There's no doubt in my mind that the taxpayers got their money's worth because they work very hard."

It's hard to escape the conclusion that this is a well-meaning public official whose competence and moral compass are both in doubt, in a job that requires unassailable integrity.

But that's a judgment for the voters, who may be much more selective in their hiring practices next November than J.D. Williams was in 1991.

Cruelty hurts good reputation

The Nature Conservancy is a highly regarded organization in the Wood River Valley.

However, upon learning of the cruel methods the conservancy is supporting in the killing of wild pigs in Hawaii, I believe it is causing irreparable damage to its reputation.

For over two years now, the Nature Conservancy has been responsible for setting hundreds of snare traps which cruelly kill. These primitive wire snares cause horrible wounds as the animal struggles to be free. The pigs are tortured by flies and maggots while they die. Unfortunately, other animals are also trapped and die.

The Nature Conservancy apparently feels that these traps are justified because they are economical.

Although the Nature Conservancy claims that wild pigs are damaging certain native self-appointed stewards of the earth, then we must show respect and compassion toward other feeling beings.

Please voice your concern to the Nature Conservancy.

Welfare, courts play God's role

I am a citizen of Twin Falls County, a taxpayer and mother of three. The Health and Welfare Department and the judicial system of Twin Falls have taken it upon themselves to play God with our lives and our children's lives. They must be stopped, they are tearing our families apart every day.

If you have been a victim of the system and you have been wronged by the system of Twin Falls and the surrounding counties or know someone who has, please contact Debbie at 734-3777 to make your voices heard.

We need fellow mothers, fathers, grandmas, grandpas, sisters, brothers, aunts and uncles to band together with us to fight this corruption in our lives.

Inmate: Idaho law equals no law

To the Justice Department:
Well, I'm locked down — no phone, no law library, no Bible, no policy and procedure, no help, no Bible, no nothing.

I don't know how long I'll be here this way. There seems to be a very concrete theory in Idaho law — no law!

I've wrote you people four times, sent you evidence, affidavits and letters of all kinds from all types of people and you just say I've got nothing coming. I suppose if I were rich I could get you to help — I'm not — so I will never be treated as an American. I guess child molesting is OK with you. And selling children is the norm as far as you're concerned. God help them. And may God forgive you.

Why aren't marshals walking Chicago's children to school?

CHICAGO — After the despicable murder of a physician and his volunteer escort outside an abortion clinic in Pensacola, Fla., last week, official reaction was swift and strong. U.S. marshals were immediately assigned to guard staff and patients there and in a dozen abortion facilities around the country.

Women, after all, have a legal right to an abortion, as pro-choice leaders and government officials pointed out. Attorney General Janet Reno told the media the Justice Department is investigating reports of a conspiracy to attack abortion clinics and staffers.

In Chicago last week, a 6-year-old boy was fatally shot in the head as he left a store with his father. A 16-year-old boy, who was shooting at someone else, was arrested and charged with the murder.

This week in Chicago, a 9-year-old boy was shot dead as he played in a yard near his home, in an area where neighbors reported several gang-related shootings in recent days. Fifteen children age 10 or younger have been murdered in Chicago so far this year.

Last month in Chicago, the mother of six children, who was trying to prevent a gang from recruiting her teen-age son, was shot to death outside her front door.

But no one is sending U.S. marshals to guard the children in Chicago's deadliest neighborhoods — or in other urban areas bloodied by gangs and guns. The attorney general has announced no investigations. There are no angry denunciations on television. It's all so expected, so ordinary, so life-as-usual.

Never mind that children have a legal right to go to the store with a parent, to play outdoors in the summer, to use their own front door. Never mind that they are legally required to go to school, however unsafe the way there, no matter how many friends they know who have died on the way. Never mind that a conspiracy case could probably be made against the gangs and the drug dealers.

Surely before the government owes people health care or grants for the arts or superhighways or welfare or subsidies for tobacco it owes its children — and all its citizens — protection from violence.

A child should not dread going to school for fear he will be gunned down on the way. He should have places to play in safety without worry about getting caught in deadly cross-fire or by bullets meant for someone else. He should not be forced to join a gang, to feel he must tote his own gun to protect his life, to see other kids and adults bleeding to death on the streets of his neighborhood, to wake up in the night to the sounds of gunfire outside his window.

The bloody toll of homicides in the United States was up 3 percent last year, to 24,000, the FBI reports. In a single year, that's about half the number of Americans who died in nine years of fighting in Vietnam. Now, deaths in the most dangerous months of July and August may be topping 1993's tragic numbers.

We must worry not only about the children who die, but about those who grow up emotionally scarred by the violence around them, who see no choice but to be part of a gang or its victim and no future for themselves except kill or be killed.

Meanwhile, the $33 billion crime bill is still stalled in Congress, as criticism of its provisions grows. It is loaded with pork and funding for welfare and social-work programs that sound good but have little proven effect on reducing crime and violence.

The legislation is touted as providing funds to hire 100,000 more police officers over six years. But, according to an analysis by the Heritage Foundation, it falls $7 billion short per year — $42 billion over six years — of the necessary money. Many state and local governments will not be able, or willing, to make up the difference and the actual increase in the nation's police forces may actually be far less.

It would be naive, of course, to assume that legislation can solve the problem of violent crime in America. There is a snarl of complicating causes and effects — poverty, racism, unemployment, drugs, alcohol, out of wedlock births to teen mothers, the absence of fathers, poor schools, distortion of values, even the very culture of poverty itself. All contribute to the problem and none can be resolved in isolation.

But the children can't wait for social and economic changes. They have to use the streets today. They must go to school next month. Society — government — owes them the right to grow up safely and without fear of violence.

No one likes the idea of sending in the marshals, as they do in old cowboy movies — or as pro-choice forces are demanding for abortion clinics. The problem is too chronic, too violent, even to merit a National Guard emergency response. But it's obvious that the cops and the courts alone aren't enough to assure endangered children of safety.

It's not only a matter of right and humanitarian concern, but of self-interest as well. Violence breeds violence and the children who live with it are more likely than others to grow up to do violence themselves. And no amount of tax dollars will be able to hire enough police or build enough prisons.

Religion belongs in education

In his latest letter, Terry Gilbert once again argued that religion has no place in our government. One again, I disagree. He began with a quote from Everson vs. Board of Education that said no preference is to be given to any religion. That statement is in direct conflict with some previous court rulings: "By our form of government, the Christian religion is the established religion, and all sects and denominations of Christians are placed upon the same equal footing." (Runkle vs. Winemiller; Maryland Supreme Court, 1799.) "Christianity, general Christianity, is and always has been part of the common law..." The laws and institutions... are built on the foundation of reverence for Christianity." (Updegraph vs. Commonwealth, Pennsylvania Supreme Court, 1824.)

In fact, no court had ever interpreted the first amendment the way the Everson court did! Even Mr. Gilbert's recommended reading concedes the following: "Such figures should make any observer cautious about dismissing the importance of religion in America, and especially cautious about dismissing the influence of the Christian faith, since it has been the primary religious expression in our history." ("The Search for Christian America," Page 18.)

Concerning the treaty between the United States and Tripoli in 1797, let's consider the circumstances surrounding it. When the United States was new, its defenses had little respect. Consequently, American ships were subject to acts of piracy from the Barbary States (which included Tripoli). In desperation, the United States agreed to pay Tripoli in order to curtail the attacks.

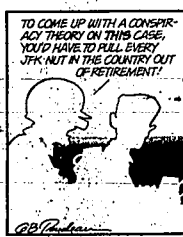

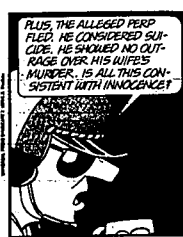

With the United States being at such a disadvantage, Tripoli probably had a strong influence on the wording of the treaty! My point is this: One obscure treaty written under those conditions shouldn't define an entire nation. The many writings of the founders and the many early court rulings that declare this a Christian nation ought to carry more weight than a treaty with Tripoli in 1797.

I'll close with Rector, Etc. of Holy Trinity Church vs. United States in 1892 (143 US 457). The court cited examples from Ferdinand and Isabella's commission to Christopher Columbus to the Mayflower Compact to the Declaration of Independence to previous court decisions, filling over two pages with documented quotes. It all came down to this: "These, and many other matters which might be noticed, all a volume of unofficial declarations to the mass of organic utterances that is the Christian nation." Indeed. May it ever be so.

No news is bad news for AIDS patients at international conference

YOKOHAMA, Japan (AP) — The gist of 3,500 reports this week from the war on AIDS is simple enough: There is no cure for AIDS, no effective treatment, no vaccine.

Nor will there be anytime soon. Anyone with HIV won't find much solace at this meeting," said Dr. Mervyn Silverman, president of the American Foundation for AIDS Research.

The tone of the 10th International Conference on AIDS, which concluded Thursday, was restrained from the start. Organizers warned the 12,000 participants not to expect anything big. They were right.

After four days of nonstop discussion, the goal of controlling HIV, the AIDS virus, seems as distant as ever.

"Breakthrough findings don't time themselves to coincide with international meetings," said Dr. Anthony Fauci, director of the U.S. National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

But in the field of AIDS, breakthroughs are rare in the months between international meetings, too. The only one that surfaced since last year's big meeting in Berlin was the discovery that AIDS-infected women can avoid passing the virus to their babies during birth if they take the drug AZT.

Even this is a limited victory. Because the medicine is so expensive, it will not help those living in poor countries, where the disease is most common. And it may be worthless to even those who can afford it if AZT-resistant strains of the virus grow dominant.

If any theme emerged from the conference, it was the need to go back to basics. Rather than a scatter-shot scramble for new drugs, many scientists seemed to agree that they need new ideas. And they get them by exploring the innermost workings of the virus and the body's complex and ultimately futile response to it.

The new head of the U.S. Office of AIDS Research said this will be the focus of the federal government's annual $1.3 billion AIDS budget.

"The engine that will drive the entire AIDS research enterprise forward is basic research," Dr. William E. Paul told the meeting.

But scientists have been gathering this kind of information since the epidemic began. Two of the most talked about subjects at the conference — long-term survivors and gene therapy — build on the encyclopedic store of basic knowledge already assembled about HIV virology and immunology.

While almost everyone who catches HIV eventually gets sick and dies, about 5 percent are still perfectly healthy 12 years to 15 years after their infection. Researchers believe that if they figure out how these people's immune systems tame HIV, maybe they could turn it into a treatment for those less fortunate.

"This is obviously a hot topic," said Dr. David Ho, head of the Aaron Diamond AIDS Research Center in New York City.

His preliminary study, presented at the meeting, offers hints of unique immune system responses in people who carry HIV without harm.

Other researchers said their decade of basic research into HIV's origins, structure and life cycle is about to result in human experiments in gene therapy, the most exotic AIDS treatment yet. The idea is to insert HIV-killing genes into people's blood cells so they will be able to protect themselves from the virus.

No one knows whether this will produce a practical AIDS therapy. Time and again, the virus has proven to be more clever than the scientists. Its principal tactic is to evolve mutant genes that make it impervious to new drugs.

During treatment, HIV quickly becomes resistant to AZT and all the other drugs developed so far. No clearly effective new ones were introduced at the meeting. Doctors still hope that mixing the drugs together will improve their potency.

"We will combine them in as many different ways as we can imagine," said Dr. Paul Volberding of the University of California at San Francisco.

However, researchers showed little of the bravura that reigned early in the epidemic, when many were convinced victory over AIDS was inevitable.

"It has outsmarted us so far, and most of us would predict it will continue to," said Dr. Mark Wainberg of McGill University in Montreal.

For now, many believe that keeping people from catching AIDS, largely through condom use, is the only practical way to control the epidemic, which continues to spread with alarming speed.

According to the World Health Organization, about 17 million people have been infected with HIV — three million in the last year alone. Africa is hardest hit, but the virus is starting to spread in Asia, the world's most populous continent.

Clearly AIDS will be a deadly foe for a long time. The International AIDS Society is planning more meetings like this one through the end of the century.

Miki Wakabayashi, 19, attaches a piece of paper written to a bamboo branch with his wish for eradication of AIDS while attending the 10th International Conference on AIDS in Yokohama.

Medellin gangs still trafficking with cartel leaders in prison

ITAGUI, Colombia (AP) — The last few leaders of the shattered Medellin drug cartel spend their days playing chess, watching videotapes and lounging around their concrete prison yard.

But they are still wealthy men, and U.S. officials believe their influence extends well beyond the watchtowers and barbed wire of the hillside jail in Itagui, a southern suburb of Medellin. Although the powerful and disciplined organization they used to run was destroyed, lower-level traffickers who used to work for it are "still moving dope" even if they don't dominate the market like they used to, said Jim Shedd, special agent with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration in Miami.

Shedd estimated that Medellin-based gangs handle 25 percent of the cocaine coming into Miami. The cartel used to control virtually all drug smuggling into the city.

The cartel, led by Pablo Escobar, accelerated its own destruction by waging a war of terrorism against the state, rival drug traffickers and perceived enemies within its ranks. Thousands of people were killed.

The backlash culminated in December with the death of Escobar, who was shot on a Medellin rooftop while trying to escape security forces who had surrounded his hideout.

Escobar's brother, Roberto, is among 20 prisoners, all of them linked to the Medellin cartel, in Itagui.

One recent afternoon, Escobar relaxed on a bench in the prison yard. A balding man with glasses, he smiled and put his arm around a woman handcuffed by the cartel leaders to prepare their food.

Two other prisoners, sitting on stools, played chess nearby. "You accused us of being terrorists! Lies!" some inmates jeered at visiting journalists, who looked down from an elevated walkway surrounding the main prison block.

U.S. and Colombian officials have shifted their attention to the drug cartel in Cali, which took over some Medellin operations and now supplies about 80 percent of the world's cocaine.

Colombian authorities are still weighing charges against Roberto Escobar. The three Ochoa brothers — Fabio, Juan David and Jorge Luis — have been convicted of playing leading roles in the Medellin cartel and are serving at least eight years in prison.

It is unclear whether cartel members are running what remains of their empire from prison. But a U.S. law enforcement official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said there is evidence of drug trafficking by people associated with the Ochoas.

Roberto Escobar, the brother of Pablo Escobar, relaxes on a bench with a woman in the yard of Itagui prison in Colombia. Escobar is among the last few leaders of the shattered Medellin drug cartel.

"Prison doesn't do anything to stop this organization," the official said. "Their money is on the outside, and there are people on the outside very loyal to the money."

Visiting hours are three times a week, and the inmates are allowed televisions and video recorders. They can make one five-minute phone call a week. Last year, guards confiscated a radio telephone found in one of the cells.

For now, the prisoners may be safest cooped up in jail because their violent ways earned them a lot of enemies.

Chief among them was a vigilante squad called "People Persecuted by Pablo Escobar" that was extremely effective in whittling down the cartel, killing Escobar associates and destroying his property.

"The only place they're completely safe is here," warden Javier Pareja said of the Itagui inmates.

Not completely. Last year, a letter bomb exploded in Roberto Escobar's face, leaving him partly blind. Now guards check all mail, and cartel members have their meals prepared outside, fearing someone could poison the prison food.

Nuclear agreement unlikely this week

GENEVA (AP) — The United States and North Korea probably won't reach an agreement in talks this week on opening the Communist state's secretive nuclear program to international inspections, the top U.S. negotiator said Thursday.

Technical experts from both countries, meanwhile, met for five hours today on the most urgent issue in the nuclear standoff: what to do with 8,000 spent nuclear fuel rods corroding in a cooling pond near the capital, Pyongyang.

There was no immediate comment on any progress. But several sources, who refused to be identified, said there were good prospects for an agreement to slow the corrosion and buy time for wider talks.

Sarajevo airlift suspended again

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Aid planes to Sarajevo were grounded Thursday after three U.N. aircraft were hit by gunfire.

The vital airlift to Sarajevo was suspended two days after it restarted because bullet holes were discovered on the U.N. planes returned safely to bases in Italy and Croatia, said Maj. Dacre Holloway, a U.N. military spokesman.

The planes were hit on the ground at the Sarajevo airport, said Peter Kessler, a U.N. aid spokesman. There was no immediate word on who was suspected of firing the shots.

The airlift, a lifeline for the besieged capital during most of the 28-month-old Bosnian war, was suspended more than three weeks ago after planes were hit by bullets believed to have been fired from Serb positions. It was restarted Tuesday.

Driver failing to stop causes car accident

TWIN FALLS — A driver failing to stop for a stop sign was cited by police as the cause of an accident that sent two people to the hospital Tuesday afternoon.

Michael Nihill, 16, of Castleford, was treated and released at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center after his pickup truck collided with a car driven by Carol Swainston, 66, of Twin Falls.

Swainston was in stable condition at the Medical Center Thursday evening, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

At about 1:11 p.m., Nihill was traveling along 1400 East when he collided with Swainston. Swainston was cited with failing to yield at a stop sign, at the intersection of 3900 North and 1400 East, according to Deputy Jim Tuttle of the Twin Falls Sheriff Department.

Earlier this week, three people were killed when the pickup truck in which they were riding was hit by a car that apparently had run a stop sign.

City Council approves new budget, final hearing set

HANSEN — The City Council this week approved the tentative budget compiled by the council. The final hearing for the 1994-95 budget will be at 7:30 p.m. August 22 in the City Hall.

Robert and Robert Gilman asked the zoning committee to allow a set-back variance and a building permit on their recently purchased property. The variance was granted.

Steven Sheets asked the council for a building permit for the addition of a bedroom and a utility room on his house at 46 2nd St. East. The permit was granted.

Peace Corps offers openings for foreign assignments

SEATTLE — The Peace Corps is looking for a few good people from the Northwest.

The Seattle office of the Peace Corps has openings for assignments in foreign countries beginning next summer. The deadline for consideration for those assignments is Sept. 1 and decisions will be made in October.

Anyone interested in the federal agency that provides assistance to the poor in foreign lands may call the Peace Corps at 1-800-424-8580.

Cenarrusa refuses to accept ICA rebuttal statement

BOISE — Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa has refused to accept the rebuttal statement supplied by the Idaho Citizens Alliance for inclusion in the voter pamphlet arguments for and against the anti-gay initiative.

Cenarrusa said the rebuttal to statement supplied by opponents of Proposition One included a factual error and what he described as defamatory language. Cenarrusa declined to say which opponent of the initiative was specifically defamed in the written rebuttal.

The alliance, founded by Kelly Walton and supported throughout the initiative drive by his family business in Heyburn, and its supporters maintain it is a pre-emptive strike against any attempt to force homosexuals with what the alliance labels as special rights.

But opponents, who include nearly every political and civic leader and both political parties, contend the initiative was based on bigotry and was not needed since there is no way the conservative Idaho Legislature would enact so-called special rights for homosexuals.

Critics have suggested that if the rebuttal statement is accepted in its original form, they would go to court to have it stricken from the Voter pamphlet.

The secretary of state was acting on the belief that he has the authority to reject improper statements from inclusion in the voter pamphlet. But officials said it was not clear whether his role was only for and against a proposition or making judgments about the propriety of the arguments themselves.

The initiative, one of two qualified for the November ballot this year, would prohibit state or local laws protecting homosexuals from discrimination.

Angry mother fears molester may go free

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A judge will decide today whether a well-known local martial arts instructor will go free or go to prison.

But no matter what Eugene Starr's fate, the pain caused by his sexual liaisons with two teenage girls will continue — for Starr and for the victims.

"This happened to my babies. It makes me angry as hell," said the mother of the two girls whom Starr admitted molesting.

The Times-News avoids identifying the victims of sex crimes.

Starr is living at his brother's house after being released from the North Idaho Correctional Institution in Cottonwood. He was freed so he could be with his son, who died of cancer last week.

The victims' mother said she fears that 5th District Judge Roger Burdick will put Starr on probation rather than behind bars.

"I hope he's not going to be lenient on him," she said.

Starr, 48, pleaded guilty in January to two felony counts of lewd conduct with a minor. He admitted abusing one girl in 1987 and having a year-long sexual affair with her sister in 1992.

In March, Burdick sentenced Starr to a minimum of five years in prison but first ordered him to spend six months in the Cottonwood rehabilitation program. Sex offenders are commonly sent to Cottonwood for psychological evaluation and treatment.

He was released for three weeks in May to travel Salt Lake City, where he donated bone marrow in an effort to save his dying son.

Starr was allowed to leave Cottonwood again Aug. 2 upon hearing that his son only had a few days to live. Gene Starr Jr., 23, died Aug. 6, and a memorial service is planned Sunday.

Officials from Cottonwood have recommended allowing Starr to remain free on probation.

The victims' mother said her daughters are angry and concerned for their safety. The youngest girl, who still lives with her mother, is afraid to stay home alone, she said.

Although Starr was not due to leave Cottonwood until Sept. 20, his sentencing was moved up because he already is in Twin Falls, and a probation recommendation from Cottonwood already has been sent to the court. Twin Falls County Prosecutor G. Richard Bevan said.

Burdick must decide whether to follow that recommendation.

Bevan said Thursday he will stick to his original recommendation that Starr spend five years in prison.

Federation to sue range

By William Brock
Times-News writer

WASHINGTON — The National Wildlife Federation is gearing up to sue Uncle Sam over a state-owned bombing training range proposed for Air Force use in southwestern Owyhee County.

The environmental group — along with its state affiliate, the Idaho Wildlife Federation — alleges violations of the federal Endangered Species Act, Clean Water Act, Wild and Scenic Rivers Act, Federal Land Policy and Management Act, and the Eagle Act.

"The Air Force and Bureau of Land Management are running roughshod over numerous federal laws," Jay Hair, president of the National Wildlife Federation, said in a news release.

Thursday, the wildlife federation gave formal notice of its intent to sue the U.S. Air Force, Defense Department, Interior Department and Bureau of Land Management. If nothing is done to satisfy the federation, the suit can proceed in 60 days.

"Idahoans are being asked to sacrifice one of the last true wilderness areas in the entire country," said Fred Christensen, Idaho Wildlife Federation President. "This lawsuit will ensure that the full effects of the proposed bombing range are exposed on the table for all to see."

In a prepared statement, Andrus accused his critics of not caring about the quality of training Air Force pilots receive — a charge Christensen flatly rejected — and claimed they were using the courts to override the broad-based citizen support for the plan.

"The proposal has been repeatedly fine-tuned to address the real wildlife impacts, and the public supports it," the governor said in a statement.

Though military officials have said existing facilities are adequate for training, Andrus has argued that the expansion will guarantee the base's future during new rounds of military base closures.

The state and national wildlife federations are imploring federal officials to drop the idea of a new bombing range altogether, said federation attorney John Kostyack. Short of that, the federation is hoping to force the Air Force to consider other locations for the state-of-the-art training range. The wildlife federation, along with several other groups, is already suing the Air Force over a related issue. That suit hinges on the failure to consider cumulative environmental effects of the arrival of 366th "Composite Wing" at Mountain Home Air Force Base and the proposed bombing training range.

to counter that suit, federal attorneys insist that existing training facilities are adequate — and Mountain Home pilots don't need the sought-after bombing range.

In Thursday's warning letter, the wildlife federation maintained:

• The Endangered Species Act has been violated because the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service hasn't been adequately consulted about ways to protect endangered bald eagles and peregrine falcons in the Owyhee canyons.

• The Air Force is already polluting some rivers and wetlands by dropping training bombs on the existing Saylor Creek Bombing Range near Bannua. Rivers and wetlands are also being polluted by flares and chaff, which the Air Force is dropping over a much larger area of southern Idaho.

• According to the federation, chaff is aluminum silicate fibers used to confuse enemy radar; the bundles are non-biodegradable. The non-explosive bombs — which weigh up to one ton each — are made of concrete, cast iron, steel, aluminum and nylon; the bombs also contain red phosphorus or titanium tetrachloride to mark where practice bombs land.

• National resources are being irretrievably committed before the range is approved. Sections of the Owyhee River canyons are being considered for federal protection under the Wild and Scenic River act, or designation as federal wilderness areas.

The Air Force already has control of 3.2 million acres of air space over southwestern Idaho, northern Nevada and eastern Oregon. Critics say the area's solitude is already threatened by Air Force activity — and any more would be unacceptable.

The latest proposal calls for two bomb impact areas, totaling 25,315 acres. The state of Idaho — spurred by Gov. Cecil Andrus — is proposing to acquire most of the land in trades with the BLM; the remaining private land would be purchased outright by the Air Force.

After the trades and sales are completed, the state would lease the land to the Air Force.

Critics, including the wildlife federations, contend that state acquisition of BLM land for Air Force use would be a violation of the Eagle Act — which requires Congressional approval for withdrawal of public lands for military purposes.

Kimberly police chief may have lied in court, investigator says

By Maria Stafford
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — Even though the former Kimberly police chief will not be charged with perjury, a state investigator's report says James Campbell may have given an inaccurate statement at a court hearing.

"I believe that there is sufficient evidence to suggest that Chief Campbell lied while under oath or had a memory lapse concerning the case," wrote Russ Renuau, chief investigator for the Idaho attorney general.

After reviewing Renuau's findings, Deputy Attorney General Michael Kane said last week that he found too much "discrepancy" between interviews done during the 3-month investigation to conclude that Campbell committed perjury.

In perjury cases, there has to be "materiality," meaning the testimony in question has to be relevant to the issue at hand, Kane added.

Whether Campbell lied in court was irrelevant to the outcome of the hearing, Kane said.

In January, Campbell testified at a new trial hearing on behalf of Douglas Doyle Roberts, who was convicted in 1992 of sexually abusing a 10-year-old Kimberly girl.

Previously, two other Kimberly girls reported to police that they were molested by Roberts.

Campbell

Campbell told the court that he was out of town on the day in December 1989 when Kimberly Sgt. Craig Carroll and social worker Carol Hammond had interviewed the girls.

The girls told the Twin Falls County prosecutor earlier this year that Campbell was at the police station and interviewed them more than once in December 1989 after their complaints against Roberts.

The Roberts case was among three criminal cases that Mayor George McAdams listed in a termination letter sent to Campbell last week.

In Renuau's report, Carroll said he recalled interviewing the girls with Hammond in Campbell's office.

According to Carroll, "Chief Campbell may have been in and out of that office a couple of times during the course of the interviews," but he did not question the girls, Renuau said in his report.

But these complaints need to be looked at and resolved.

So Hymas formed a temporary committee of local business leaders, who held their first meeting Thursday, to recruit a new business to fill Moore's shoes.

The committee includes Hymas, state Department of Commerce official Pete Fisher, Jerome City Administrator Larry Paine, Region IV Economic Development Director Joe Herring, local businessman Dave Martin, Twin Falls Economic Development Director Dave MacLindin, Job Service Analyst Lon McDonald, and Moore Plant Manager Jerry Alexander.

Alexander said Moore executives will come to Jerome at the end of August help the committee recruit. They should also have a decision on when the plant will be closed jobs at other Moore plants.

cording to the attorney general's report.

Because the girls' parents were not in the room during the interviews, the parents could not say exactly who interviewed them. However, they did say Campbell was at the station for the duration of the interviews, the report said.

Hammond, a social worker, told the investigator that he had scheduled an appointment for a meeting with Campbell at the Kimberly Police Department for 11 a.m. on Dec. 14, 1989.

The girls and their parents joined the meeting later. Hammond said he allowed Campbell and Carroll to conduct the interviews because he was new on the job.

A few days later, the case was closed, according to Renuau's report.

"A few days following these initial interviews, he (Hammond) recalls being contacted by Chief Campbell and told that follow up interviews with the girls had been scheduled," Renuau wrote.

Although their complaints never resulted in criminal charges against Roberts, the two girls testified at the trial in which he was convicted of molesting the 10-year-old.

Roberts' request for a new trial was denied. He currently is serving a life sentence in the Idaho State Penitentiary while his case is being appealed to the state Supreme Court.

Man charged with murder in stabbing

JEROME — A 24-year-old man was charged Thursday with first-degree murder in the stabbing of a migrant worker near Hazelton.

Gabriel Martinez is being held in the Jerome County jail in lieu of $200,000 bond.

He and three other men were arrested earlier this week, after Kaul Rojas-Contreras was found dead at a farm northeast of Hazelton.

Contreras, believed to be about 22 years old, died inside a small trailer house after being stabbed in the chest. Officials reported Contreras also had several deep slash wounds on his hands, indicating he had tried to defend himself before being stabbed.

A preliminary hearing for Martinez is set for Aug. 24 at 1 p.m. A magistrate judge will decide after that hearing whether prosecutors have enough evidence to take the case to trial in District Court.

Second-degree murder carries a sentence of five years to life in prison.

Three men who were sharing the trailer house with Contreras and Martinez also are being held in lieu of $10,000 bond as material witnesses. No charges have been filed against them.

Some of the men involved rushed to the nearby home of Doug and Lorinda Grant Sunday night and asked them to call an ambulance. The men said there had been an accidental stabbing.

Lorinda Grant tried to revive Contreras, but he was dead when emergency crews arrived.

Contreras and Martinez worked together at a dairy. The three other men worked for the Grants; all five had been staying in the 8-by-30 trailer on the Grant farm.

Jerome County Sheriff George Silver said earlier this week that the murder suspect is believed to be an illegal alien. The stabbing probably stemmed from a disagreement between Contreras and his attacker, and alcohol was involved, Silver said.

He could not be reached for further comment Thursday.

2 injured in separate mountain-climbing falls

MOOSE, Wyo. (AP) — Two people are recovering from injuries suffered in separate mountain-climbing accidents in Grand Teton National Park this week, officials said.

Jason Davis, 15, of Nampa, was injured Tuesday when he slid about 200 feet on Schoolroom Glacier, officials said. He suffered numerous lacerations to his leg, back and scalp.

Davis was part of a group on an extended hiking and camping trip in the park, officials said. He did not have an ice axe and was not wearing a helmet when he fell.

On Wednesday, Chris Schneider, 33, of San Jose, Calif., suffered serious head and back injuries when he fell about 100 feet while attempting to climb the Grand Teton. He also was not wearing a helmet, officials said.

Lack of money may delay new sewer, water systems for Wendell

By Steve Koehler
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — The city has upgraded its water and sewer systems over the years, but growth, modern regulations and aging pipes mean it may cost more than $2.6 million to improve them.

The Region IV Development Association will survey residents to find out how much they are willing to pay.

The survey will be mailed by the end of August, followed by a town meeting, Mayor Lynn Nelson said.

While the survey is being prepared, City Engineer Scott Bybee and other city officials are looking at ways to pay for the improvements.

Paying for water and sewer line extensions with monthly user fees violates state law, Bybee said. They must be paid by bonding; only replacements can be paid with user fees.

Farmers Home Administration of low to maintain its own systems, he said.

Wendell's basic rate for water, sewer and sanitation is $12.60. Bybee said the rate would have to be $15 to $18 before the FHMA would consider a grant.

The low rates may also rule out help from the state Department of Commerce, Bybee said.

The district would tax everyone along a new sewer line, Bybee said. But an improvement district would be more difficult to implement than a bond, he said.

Wendell already has received a federal grant which is paying Bybee's engineering firm to create a topographic map of the city needed to install new sewer lines.

Engineer outlines water, sewer problems

By Steve Koehler
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — The price tag for repairing and upgrading the city's water and sewer systems could range from $1.3 million to $2.6 million.

The final cost depends on the amount of blasting and the size of systems chosen, said City Engineer Scott Bybee of JUB Engineers, Twin Falls.

Bybee said Wendell residents must consider several factors when looking at the repair costs:

• The insurance rates depend on the delivery capability of city water.

• New wells require a chlorination system that can be activated when needed.

• The city may have to build a storm sewer system.

• A good water meter system is an asset in receiving grants.

• The city's water and sewer system needs include:

• Complete Monroe Well at a cost of $17,000 to $20,000.

• Install water storage tank big enough to hold 400,000 to 1 million gallons at a cost of $285,000 to $380,000.

• Install sewer lines with video camera at a cost of $4,000 to $8,000.

• Install 30 to 60 fire hydrants at a cost of $90,000 to $125,000.

• Replace water main lines less than six inches in diameter at a cost of $105,000 to $225,000.

• Complete grid of large water lines that feed six-inch lines at a cost of $220,000-$550,000.

• Upgrade water mains at a cost of $60,000 to $280,000.

• Develop another well between 1999 and 2002 at a cost of $90,000 to $140,000.

• Replace damaged or inadequate sewer lines at $40,000 to $120,000.

• Upgrade the Boise Street lift station by 1997. Bybee estimated the cost at $15,000 to $25,000.

• Install eight-inch sewer mains on the west side to serve homes with septic systems at $20,000 to $40,000.

• Install lift station on west side at $45,000 to $65,000.

• Install large "interceptor" sewer line on the west side at a cost of $175,000 to $250,000.

Mayor proposes tri-county board

By Bob Berezant
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Gooding Mayor David Adams this week proposed that Gooding, Lincoln, and Jerome counties form a Tri-County Transportation, Planning and Program Board.

Jerome County Commissioners agreed to the proposal.

Twin Falls County's proposed loop to pull tourists off Interstate 84 to the Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument and through Buhl, Filer and Twin Falls needs to be off-set with a similar plan for the north portion containing less than 400 acres to be considered a subdivision.

With proposed bike trails and the federal funding involved it would be easier and smoother for all three counties to plan and all resolutions to the problems they face as a group instead of separately.

"We will have more control this way," Adams said.

In another matter, zoning Administrator Art Brown proposed that everything less than 40 acres would be considered a subdivision under a change in how the county handles subdivisions.

In the past, five acres were considered a farm, whereas, today, forty acres are considered to be the amount of acreage needed to operate a farm. The proposal would do away with the five acre clause and establish any future division of property containing less than forty acres to be considered a subdivision.

In other business, Southern Idaho Regional Solid Waste District Director Terry Schultz informed commissioners of the closure of the Jerome County landfill.

"It is now covered with 275 to 3 feet of soil. It is to be inspected today by the Health Department, the board was then halted off. This will complete the closure of the site sometime this week," said Schultz.

Problems were then discussed that are occurring at the new waste transfer site.

A large percent of the loads hauled by Circle A Trucking Co., the firm hauling the county's trash to the Regional Landfill in Cassia County, are overweight, resulting in fines. At the same time, the average load is only 12 tons.

Commissioners agreed to buy new scales to reduce overloads and increase the average load to something closer to the 20 ton limit for cost efficient operations.

Circle A just bought several new trailers and will keep two trailers at the waste transfer site all times. One for loading and one empty trailer on stand by.

Moore had a payroll of more than $5 million a year and its employees lived in Wendell, Shoshone, Twin Falls, Jerome and other cities in the Magic Valley.

Hyman said his first concern is getting a new employees new jobs with benefits similar to what Moore's had.

"If they've been making $12 or $14 an hour and they have to take a $5-an-hour job that's quite an adjustment," he said.

Moore is a custom printer of business forms and labels.

The Idaho Statute newspaper reported Thursday that the Jerome plant will close in March, but the newspaper didn't attribute that information.

Alexander and Moore corporate spokeswoman Dixie Williams said they didn't know where the March closing date came from and said the company wasn't decided on when the plant will close.

"It's still the first quarter as far as we know," Alexander said. "I would hope it would take longer."

He added that some employees in Jerome will be offered jobs at other Moore plants in St. George, Utah; Visalia, Calif.; and Iowa City, Iowa.

Hyman and his committee are also working with local chambers of commerce, the College of Southern Idaho and even the U.S. Forest Service to get involved in corporate responsibility.

The effect of the Moore closing is expected to be severe.

to 15 years in prison, but history is not on his side.

Since Bevan took office in January 1993, only once has a judge ordered a child molester to prison after receiving a probation recommendation from Coltonwood, he said.

"It's very highly unlikely that people go out of Cottonwood to the penitentiary out of this district," Bevan said.

But Burdick had strong words for Starr at his March sentencing.

He told Starr that he did not believe the state instructor's story that the girls encouraged him to have sex.

"If I put you on the street on probation today, you'd start grooming someone else," Burdick said then. "I need to protect society from you at this time."

But Starr said in a telephone interview Thursday that he is not a danger to society.

"It's never, ever going to happen again," Starr said. As the adult in the situation, he was responsible for what happened, he said.

His shortened stay in Cottonwood made him "a lot better Christian" and taught him to take responsibility for his actions, Starr said.

Now Starr says he wants a chance to repay the damage he has done to his family and the community where he has worked for 22 years.

He hopes to take a job with a friend's construction company and eventually reopen his martial-arts studio.

"I've got a lot of support from the community," Starr said. "I want to make amends for the hurt I've caused."

Police arrest man, 26, on drug charges

RUPERT — State and local police arrested three Rupert men Wednesday on felony drug charges.

Felipe Cantu, 26, was charged with two counts; Rosario Reyes, 39, was charged with one count; and Jesus Bujanda, 27, was charged with one count of delivering a controlled substance.

Cantu and Reyes are being held in Mini-Cassia jail on $100,000 bond, and Bujanda is being held on $50,000 bond.

Bujanda, an illegal alien, also is charged with re-entering the country illegally, said Merrill Kelley, special agent for the Idaho Bureau of Narcotics.

In addition, the men are charged with failure to affix tax stamps to their drug deliveries — a felony punishable by up to seven years in prison and a $15,000 fine, Minidoka County Deputy Prosecutor E. Scott Paul said.

Police had been investigating the men for several months and arrested them between 7 p.m. and 8 p.m. Wednesday after obtaining warrants that morning, Kelley said.

School official will attend Boise meeting

BOISE — Cassia County's top school official will join other members of a state education reform committee at a meeting with candidates for Idaho Superintendent of Public Instruction in Boise Monday.

Cassia County Schools Superintendent Everett Howard is chairman of Idaho's School Reform Committee.

The committee was appointed three years ago, and is responsible for spending $2 million in state funds earmarked by the Idaho Legislature for reform projects in 1994-95.

Howard said he and other members will meet with outgoing state schools superintendent Jerry Evans and the three candidates vying to replace him.

The meeting begins at 9:30 a.m. in the west conference room of the J.R. Williams Building, 700 W. State St. The candidates forum begins at 1:30 p.m.

80th birthday celebration planned

FARMINGTON, Utah — An open house to help Opal Bergener celebrate her 80th birthday is planned for 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday at the city park in Farmington, Utah.

Opal Juanita Williams was born Aug. 15, 1914, in Comanche, Okla. She moved with her family to Burley in 1929 and attended school there. She married Arthur G. Bergener on Nov. 29, 1933, in the LDS Temple in Logan, Utah, and they settled in the Burley/Oakley area. They moved to Blackfoot in 1966, and she became the first city councilwoman of Blackfoot in 1984. She served an LDS Mission in Raleigh, N.C., and then moved to Farmington, Utah, in 1988.

She has six sons: Bryan, Bill and Beto, all of Salt Lake City; Lynn of Virginia Beach, Va.; Brad of Zillah, Wash.; and Todd of Rexburg; four daughters, Becky Washburn of Blackfoot, Judy Woodworth of American Falls, Shirley Mangum of Waco, Texas, and Brenda Heaton of Idaho Falls; 41 grandchildren and 26 great-grandchildren.

Birthday open house set for Saturday

BURLEY — An open house to celebrate Virginia Schrock's 80th birthday is planned for 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday at the First Presbyterian Church, 2100 Burton Ave.

Schrock requests no gifts and asks that a personal note of remembrance be left instead.

Rupert councilman willing to replace resigning mayor

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

RUPERT — City Councilman Dwinelle Allred says he is willing to replace resigning Mayor W.F. "Bill" Whitton.

Allred said he told each of the council members about two days ago. Council members have joked that he should become mayor after Whitton announced his resignation on July 28, he said.

"I told them I would give it favorable consideration," Allred said. Allred has served on the council for 21 years and is the vice-president of First Security Bank in Rupert.

Paul Rogers, who lost the election last fall to Whitton by two votes, also has told council members he would like the job.

Others also have suggested can-

Whitton

He also stressed that he did not seek the appointment, but was merely responding to councilmen's suggestions.

"I have not indicated to them: 'Here I am. Draft me,'" Allred said.

Councilmen Steve Porch and Steve Barras declined to say Thursday if they had even men-dated, council members said.

"One councilman recently asked if Allred would consider becoming mayor," Allred said. Allred declined to say whom, saying he did not want to commit that councilman to voting for him.

Allred said he would not make a motion on an appointment for mayor. He can vote on the appointment, but only to break a tie, Allred said.

Whitton resigned July 28. He has served 16 years as mayor.

Street repairs near completion

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The City Council moved closer to finishing repairs on 8th Street Thursday by agreeing to accept bids for asphalt and other materials.

The city is trying to finish the project as quickly and cheaply as possible; Councilman Dwinelle Allred said. Residents have complained that repairs have taken too long and that dust has been rising from the torn-up streets, he said.

The street, from A to K streets, has been under construction for nearly a year. Public Works Director Don Dustin said. City trucks are watering the roads more often to keep the dust down, he said.

The streets will be paved by the end of September and the rest of the work will be done by Nov. 1, Dustin said.

The city is repairing sewer and water lines and storm drains, he said. But the completion of the project is hindered by the limitations of state and federal grants, which require extra paperwork and costly authorization, he said.

The work will be done under the direction of the city, using a combination of city and private equipment and labor, Allred said. Curb and gutters need to be installed and roads and sidewalks need to be paved by the end of the year.

Several months earlier, the council rejected a $921,000 bid for the work by Gordon Paving Co. in Burley. It was about $300,000 to $500,000 higher than the council expected, Allred said.

Utah wildfire costs out of control

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The last of Utah's uncontained wildfires is on its last legs, with no new fires threatening to spread over the state's rangelands and forests, fire officials said.

The 12,000-acre Black Willow Fire in the Fishlake National Forest was all but contained Thursday, said fire spokesman Jack Langley.

"We're letting some of our forces go," he said. "If everything goes well, we'll have it contained at six o'clock tonight."

In northern Utah, where two big fire complexes have burned more than 26,000 acres, National Guard volunteers will mop up.

The fire center spokeswoman Kathy Jo

Pollock, "We are ready to go into demobilization. Everything is contained."

For now, anyway.

"Where the weather is dry and hot with dry lightning and wind, we still have a long ways to go this summer," she said.

The 12,837-acre Tooele Complex, composed of the East Harker, Erickson and Reilly fires, is contained and expected to be under control by midnight Thursday.

The 13,554-acre Rich County Complex, made up of the Edgar and Dry Canyon fires, was under full control Wednesday.

Now comes payment time. According to Eastern Great Basin Fire Coordination Center figures, the Black Willow and Tooele fires have cost an estimated $1.5 million combined.

The Edgar Canyon and Dry Canyon II fires have cost approximately $1.33 million to fight to date.

The state's total budget for fighting this season is $25,000.

Sue White, spokeswoman for the fire coordination center, said there have been 48 major wildfires in Utah since June 1, scorching just under 200,000 acres. The costs to fight 27 of those fires, which covered 135,063 acres, has exceeded $5.2 million. That does not include rehabilitation costs.

In Rich County, which budgeted just $1,900 for wildfire suppression, officials are struggling with the numbers.

Supreme Court justice gives speech at BYU

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Unlike a generation ago, women today can successfully mix careers and family. Sandra Day O'Connor told a crowd of 7,000 at Brigham Young University's Thursday commencement exercises.

"In less than one generation, conditions for women in the United States have changed dramatically," said O'Connor, appointed in 1981 as the first female U.S. Supreme Court justice.

She looked back 40 years to illustrate the progress women have made, recalling a speech she heard by former Democratic Sen. Adlai Stevenson. He told Smith College graduates the best way to influence world crises was by influence ing their husbands and sons.

"That speech would not be given today," she said. "Today, young women are expected to have, and do have, a direct influence on public affairs."

O'Connor also pointed to her own life as an example of women's changing roles in society.

In 1952, she said, "there were very few women lawyers. The job opportunities for them were even fewer. As some of you may have read, the only job offer I received in the private sector was a job as a legal secretary."

At the same time, now-Chief Justice William Rehnquist, a fellow law graduate from Stanford — quickly received a clerkship with the Supreme Court.

O'Connor said the graduates of BYU today will be able to "pursue careers, or marry and have families or both."

"Combining a career and a family is certainly not easy, but it is possible. I speak from experience as a wife and a mother of three sons," she added.

O'Connor, who received an honorary doctorate degree just before taking the podium, told the Mormon Church-owned school's women graduates to embrace a promising future, knowing that "the tide is running in your favor, the wind is at your back."

House votes to scrap Idaho research reactor program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has passed compromise legislation that scraps a nuclear research reactor program and the 900 jobs it accounts for at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

But Idaho's senators said they were encouraged after a meeting with Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary that federal officials will work to develop follow-on and alternative missions that will save many of the jobs.

By a 393-34 vote, the House on Wednesday adopted the $20.7 billion energy and water development appropriation approved by House and Senate negotiators last week. The measure now goes to the Senate for final action.

The bill includes $83.8 million to terminate the Integral Fast Reactor program, the research program being conducted at Argonne National Laboratory facilities in Chicago and Idaho.

The administration had asked the program be ended. But supporters, led by Idaho Gov.

Cecil Andrus, campaigned for the project, claiming the government would spend just as much to shut it down as it would to complete the test phase.

Critics have argued that it is too expensive and could lead to nuclear proliferation. But supporters have defended it as a potential way to dispose of plutonium.

"I was encouraged with the meeting (with O'Leary)," Sen. Dirk Kempthorne said. "We all realized that the money approved in conference is far short of what is needed. I felt there was a sincere communication where we all have agreed we're working together on this project now."

"Hazel O'Leary has agreed to work with Idaho and Illinois senators to save jobs and keep important research moving ahead," Sen. Larry Craig said. "That's good news. We will be working together to keep INEL in the forefront of high tech research."

"We stressed the tremendous asset in the people that we have here in place, and that it would be a shame to dismantle that asset," Kempthorne said.

Congress approved $83.8 million for next year, which officials say isn't enough to dismantle the IFR safely. One of the first steps would be removing the reactor's fuel, but there's nowhere to put it, spokesman Dick Lindsay said.

The reactor was designed to recycle its fuel, so there was no mechanism for removing and storing it. It will take at least $104 million a year over three years for safely close reactor operations, Lindsay said.

Two costumed bears flag down rush-hour traffic near downtown Boise on Tuesday. They were trying to draw attention to a fund-raising group from Impact International that is working to collect 500 teddy bears to distribute to area police officers, firefighters and paramedics to hand out to children. The group plans on giving them to officials today.

Lewiston woman sentenced to prison

LEWISTON — Dianna Lee Vick came close to committing murder when she shot at a Lewiston building and then a police officer, 2nd District Judge Ronald Schilling says.

Schilling sentenced Vick to 10 to 20 years in prison Wednesday for aggravated assault on an officer and another two to five years for unlawful discharge of a firearm. The sentences will be served concurrently.

The maximum sentence she could have received on both charges, plus a sentencing enhancement for use of a firearm, was 30 years. Vick, 27, will not be eligible for parole for 10 years.

Robert Van Idour, Vick's attorney, told Schilling the mentally ill woman was attempting suicide when she fired at Officer Ron Nelson on Jan. 12.

Tribes hopes to clean up toxic metals

COEUR D'ALENE — Before the snow flies, the Coeur d'Alene Indian Tribe hopes to have cleaned up mining-related toxic metals from the site of the historic Cataldo Mission.

That may not mean digging up tainted dirt and hauling it off. But scientists and land managers were a little skeptical about a proposal they heard about Wednesday. A contractor says he can clean the soil, putting it back in place.

That would save the cost of removal. It also would eliminate the need for a place to put the waste, a major problem in a valley filled with tainted dirt.

The Cataldo Mission, completed in 1853, is Idaho's oldest standing building. The mission is operated by the state Department of Parks and Recreation on tribal property along the Coeur d'Alene River. It attracts 75,000 visitors a year.

Man to plead innocent to murder charge

BOISE — Phillip D. Walker will plead innocent to first-degree murder in the death of his girlfriend's 24-year-old son, his defense attorney says.

Public Defender Ann Myshin said Walker, 18, probably will enter the plea next Wednesday. Police contend Walker confessed to them twice that he sodomized Chevelle Freeman on July 16.

Freeman died July 19 of an infection caused by a tear in his colon, Ada County Coroner Erwin Sonnenburg said.

Myshin made his announcement after a Wednesday court hearing before 4th District Judge Alan Schwartzman. Walker could have entered a plea Wednesday, but did not.

Idaho fires similar to famous inferno

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The year was 1910, the month was August, and from Newport, Wash., to Taft, Mont., from the Clearwater to the Canadian border, the mountains roared.

Nearly 3 million acres of Idaho and Montana forest exploded into flames on Aug. 20, 1910, when a hundred separate fires suddenly blew together in a high wind that swept through northern Idaho.

Entire towns and villages were destroyed in the fire of 1910 — the "Big Blowup," it was called. Half of Wallace burned, its families evacuated.

The smoke plume emanating from the region was so great that in Buffalo, N.Y., street lights had to be turned on at noon for visibility, and ships on the European side couldn't navigate through it.

"Could it happen again?" "I wouldn't speculate on that," U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman Judy Smith said.

But some eerie parallels exist between 1994 and 1910, Smith said.

To start with, both are dry years. Less than 5 percent of the time is a year as dry as 1910 or 1994.

The initial lightning strikes that started the 1910 fire occurred on July 23 that year.

The first lightning that started the 80 currently active fires in the region also occurred July 23 this year.

"They had about 4,000 firefighters working in the Northwest by this time in 1910. I would say we have the same number now," she said.

The woods were ripe for a burn in 1910, same as they are now, say foresters.

"The fuel load is there," said Ken Kohli, spokesman for the Intermountain Forest Industry Association.

"We've got the dead fuel, we've got the dryness. For the last five or six years, the Forest Service has done very little (to remove dead and dying timber). They're going to have to live with their dead timber situation out there," Kohli said.

Privately-managed timber stands are in better shape because dead and dying trees have been thinned out, he said.

In the past 19 days, 400 fires have been started in northern Idaho — all but a handful lightning-caused, Smith said.

That compares to an entire normal year's 71 lightning strikes, "and we're not yet into the peak of the fire season," she said.

"The potential for the big bust is there," she said, but regional fire crews have done a superb job of not letting small starts get out of hand.

"I'm very proud and encouraged by the success of our initial attack efforts so far," she said.

And fire crews nowadays have two things the forest protectors of 1910 didn't have: aerial fire suppression, and road access to the woods.

Still, everyone in the timber business is watching the sky nervously for lightning, and wondering if the coincidences with 1910 are just that, or an early warning from Mother Nature that the mountains will roar again.

Group organizes against ICA

LEWISTON (AP) — A Nez Perce County group against the Idaho Citizens Alliance's anti-gay rights initiative has launched its organizing campaign.

Elizabeth Brandt of Moscow, president of Latin-Nez Perce Voices for Human Rights, said a separate Nez Perce County organization will be formed if enough people become involved.

Tina Alexander of Lewiston said it will meet regularly through the November election.

"This is an effort on the part of the radical right to take away our independence and impose discrimination against us," she told about 30 people.

Alliance spokesman Alan Slus and his group have a loose affiliation of volunteers in Nez Perce County. The alliance is currently searching for a regional director for northern Idaho's 10 counties, he said earlier.

Dorothy Fritz of the Nez Perce County Christian Coalition said a network of individuals organized to collect voter signatures to put the initiative on the November ballot.

According to the Nez Perce County auditor's office, 736 registered voters signed the petitions.

The initiative would prohibit state and local governments from granting minority status to homosexuals and bar public school teachers from portraying homosexuality as acceptable behavior.

It also would forbid state money from being spent to express approval of homosexuality and limit access to library materials addressing homosexuality to adults.

Couple admits to suicide pact

BONNERS FERRY (AP) — A California couple who walked out of the woods from a camping trip with their throats slashed nearly car by car has admitted inflicting the injuries themselves as part of an unsuccessful suicide pact.

"It appears it was a mutual agreement to slash each other's throats at the same time," Boundary County Sheriff Bruce Whittaker said. "They expected to cut each other, go to sleep and wake up dead. But they didn't wake up dead."

Francis Olson, 24, and Jennifer Rund, 22, initially told police they had amnesia and could not remember their names, or how their throats were slashed.

Using a bank receipt found at their camp site, authorities determined the couple had been reported missing by their parents for several weeks from Santa Cruz County, Calif.

The two apparently drove to Idaho and tried to cross into Canada, but were turned back when customs agents found illegal drugs in their car, Whittaker said. The pair then camped in the Katka Ridge area, about seven miles east of Bonners Ferry, he said.

The Powerball jackpot winner in Rhode Island

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A ticket purchased in Rhode Island matched all of the numbers drawn for the $7.6 million Powerball lottery jackpot Wednesday night.

Lottery officials did not identify the retailer where the winner was sold and nobody immediately stepped forward to claim the prize.

The jackpot returns to the miniimum $2 million for the weekend drawing.

Four other tickets got the first five numbers but missed the Powerball to win the game's $100,000 second prize.

Those were purchased in Iowa, Arizona, Kentucky and Minnesota.

The winning numbers were 2, 11, 20, 27 and 44. The Powerball was 16.

Nitty Gritty Dirt Band straddles line between rock, country

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band first hit paydirt in the late '60s with a folk/pop tune titled "Mr. Bojangles." It hasn't missed a beat for the next 28 years.

"Jimmy Fadden and I have been playing together since 1966, and Jimmy Ibbotson joined the band in 1969," said Jeff Hanna, Nitty Gritty's guitarist/vocalist, in a recent phone interview. Bob Carpenter signed on with the group in the mid-'70s.

The guys first burst onto the Southern California music scene on May 13, 1966, with a performance at the Paradox Club in Orange. They were wearing 1920s pin-striped suits and cowboy boots.

By 1972, the members of the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band were being called "a ragtag bunch of hippies committed to traditional American music." Ragtag or not, the band went on track up a Country Music Association Album of the Year, several Grammys and 16 top-10 singles. In 1989, they were inducted into the CMA Walk of Fame.

"In 1972, we started playing hybrid country with a rock 'n' roll heart," explained Hanna, who, like his fellow band members, is in his mid-40s now. "Sometimes we were a little more pop, sometimes more folk, sort of dirt band stew."

Good music has something to do with Nitty Gritty's longevity, Hanna has decided, but he said there's also an element of luck, and the fact that the group has managed to hold onto a record deal through the years.

"We are just happy to have a job," he said. Members of the band lived in Colorado for years, but eventually, they scattered. Today, two of them live in Nashville, one in Los Angeles and one's still in Colorado. They tour May through September and work on records. "We have families, and we are actually home big chunks of time," Hanna said. "We sort of have a life."

The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band recorded what was to become a landmark in country music in 1970, when they released a three-record set of "Will the Circle Be Unbroken," featuring such greats as Maybelle Carter, John Huskey, Doc Watson, Roy Acuff and Vassar Clements. In 1978, the group booked a promising young comedian named Steve Martin as its opening act — and ended up recording "King Tut" with him.

By the early '80s, Nitty Gritty was teaming up with Linda Ronstadt on pop hits like "An American Dream."

Jeff Hanna, Bob Carpenter, Jimmy Ibbotson and Jimmie Fadden have graduated from "a ragtag bunch of hippies committed to traditional American music."

Fair schedule — C2

The name of the band was born of the group's early days as a jug band.

"We wanted something about getting down to the basics," Hanna said, "and the dirt band part just made up."

Two months ago, the band released a new album, "Acoustic," which consists of just that. "We wanted to go back to our roots, rely on the songs and vocals, not the bigness of the background," Hanna said.

A single from the album, "Cupid's Got a Gun," has been made into a video, currently being aired on TNN.

Kristofferson still takes road less traveled

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

--- JACKPOT — Kris Kristofferson is a new daddy.

Never mind the Golden Globe or the Country Music Songwriter of the Year Award or his hits "Me and Bobby McGee" and "Help Me Make It Through the Night." Today, Kristofferson, at age 58, is talking diamonds and bibles.

His new son, Blake (named after William, the poet), just turned 2 weeks old. "I love kids," said Kristofferson on Thursday in a phone interview from his home on the island of Maui, Hawaii, where he moved his family four years ago in search of small-town life. "I'm better with kids the older I get."

Kristofferson, who was married to singer Rita Coolidge for seven years, has eight children. They range in age from 32 to ... Blake. The five youngest live with Kristofferson and his third wife, Lisa, who was a law student when they married 11 years ago. Now, she's a full-time mom.

When Kristofferson told his own parents he wanted to be a musician, they were not impressed. Born Kristoffer Kristofferson in Brownsville, Texas, the budding songwriter spent his youth moving wherever his father, an Air Force major general, was assigned. He earned a degree in creative literature from Pomona College in California and was awarded a Rhodes Scholarship to Oxford University, where he studied Blake.

After a stint in the Army, he declined a teaching position at West Point to move to Nashville and write music. "Back then, it was not considered a real option to become an entertainer when you grew up," Kristofferson recalled. "I was expected to do something a lot more responsible, especially after I won the Rhodes Scholarship."

But the music wouldn't die.

Kris Kristofferson

Kris Kristofferson will perform at 8 and 11 p.m. Friday and Saturday and at 8 p.m. Sunday at Cactus Petes Resort Casino in Jackpot, Nev. Ticket prices are $15, $20 and $25. Cocktails only are available at all shows. For information or reservations, call 1-800-821-1103.

Kristofferson worked as a janitor, bartender and helicopter pilot to pay the bills. Success finally arrived when "Sunday Morning Coming Down" won 1970's Country Music Song of the Year Award. Since then, Kristofferson's had his songs recorded by hundreds of artists and has been named to the Songwriter's Hall of Fame.

It makes sense. Kristofferson thinks of himself as a songwriter (who's starting to write longer fiction). Even though his family

Growing Hispanic heritage festival marks 5th renewal

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Mike Youngman will set up a cantina in City Park Sunday afternoon, but don't look for it Monday morning.

"It's designed to fold up," said Youngman, director of the Twin Falls Senior Center and a longtime backer of the city's Hispanic heritage festival. "We'll serve our pop and then we'll be out of there." As about 12 feet by 12 feet by 10 feet, with a different scene painted on each side — including Pancho Villa, the early 20th century Mexican revolutionary, and Quetzalcoatl, a nature God of the Indian tribes of Mexico, represented as a plumed serpent.

"I've always had an interest (in Mexican images), so I went to Jim Woods (director of the Herrett Museum) and he dug out some materials for me, including several of Quetzalcoatl," Youngman said.

A part-time art instructor at the College of Southern Idaho, Youngman came up with idea of the cantina for the fifth renewal of the festival, Un Dia en El Valle. "A day in the valley," It's become the largest celebration of Hispanic culture in the Magic Valley, which has about 11,000 residents of Hispanic descent, according to the Census Bureau.

Youngman became the fiesta's first sponsor when one of his employees at the seniors' center at the time, Gloria Galan, organized the festival in 1990. "I wanted to build something that was culturally unique that could be a part of the fiesta," he said. "A portable cantina

Cassia fair will begin Tuesday

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Five days of bull-doggin', guitar-pickin' and fun begin Tuesday when the Cassia County Fairgrounds opens its gates for the annual county fair.

First up are Muzzie Braun and the Boys and Marty Davis, who'll perform at 7:30 p.m. Cost of a ticket is $3.

On Wednesday morning, the 4-H and exhibition display will open at the fairgrounds. A parade is scheduled for noon, starting near Mountain View Elementary School, up Overland Avenue and left on Main Street, ending at the park. Ray and Nedra Bedke will serve as grand marshals.

The carnival will open at noon, and the Nitty Gritty Dirt band will play at 7 and 9 p.m.

The Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association-sanctioned rodeo — one of only two remaining in the Magic Valley, along with the Twin Falls County Fair Rodeo — is scheduled for 8 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the fairgrounds arena.

Friday is family night, with five people admitted to the rodeo for $16.

There will be pari-mutuel horse racing Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 1 p.m.

The fut stock sale is slated for 9 a.m. Saturday.

Heyburn kicks off 8th Hoedown with pig roast

The Times-News

HEYBURN — Fire-keg pushing, pig roasting, and, of course, ping-pong ball dropping will highlight Heyburn's eighth annual Hoedown on Saturday.

It'll start at noon with a pig roast, including corn on the cob, pork and beans, hash browns, rolls and applesauce, served in Galawn Park. Cost is $3.

Lunch will be accompanied by live music, which also starts at noon. Also on the agenda is a fire-keg push, in which Heyburn firefighters use high-pressure water hoses to fend a keg across the length of an overhead cable wire.

Then at 2 and 3:30 p.m., pilot Dean Baker will fly over the park and dunk 150 ping-pong balls, some of them earmarked to earn whoever collects them prizes.

Top prizes will include two mountain bikes.

There will also be booths, featuring the works of local artists, as well as model airplanes, hand-carved guns and veterans' and police displays.

After 13 years, War members tour, but aren't making their comeback

NEW YORK (AP) — Don't call it a comeback.

Yes, it's been 13 years since their last album of new music. OK, their last hit predates that by four years. And sure, the son of one original member is now in the band with dad.

Yet the three core members of War — a real 1970s blast from the past — bristle at the suggestion that their current album and tour is some one-shot get-together to trade in on their greatest hits.

"We never left," they never broke the band up," guitarist Howard Scott said during a recent Manhattan stopover. "A lot of groups call themselves comebacks. War is a band that stayed together, and what we have now in the '90s is stronger."

What they also have is "Peace Sign," a new album on a new label started by the man who first hooked them up with Eric Burdon 25 years ago.

"We have over 90 years experience playing between the three of us," said drummer Harold Brown, sitting with Scott and bassist Lonnie Jordan.

"The good, the bad, and the ugly," joked Scott, as all three broke into laughter.

A brief history lesson: It was 1969 when Burdon first heard the band then known as The Night Shift — backing up L.A. Rams star Deacon Jones at a Los Angeles club. He was brought to the club by record producer Jerry Goldstein, the current head of Avenue Records.

Burdon liked what he heard, the band changed its name to War and a string of hit singles followed. Burdon left after "Spill the Wine," which was followed by "Slippin' Into Darkness," "The Cisco Kid," "The World Is a Ghetto," "Me and Baby Brother," "Why Can't We Be Friends?", "Low Rider" and "Summer." By 1977, the hits had stopped coming. Disco was dominant, and the band's funky sound was out of style. The band's last studio album, the poorly received "Outlaw," was released in 1981.

Rockbeat

"The mainstream of music in that era was John Travolta, the Bee Gees," said Scott, warming to his subject. "We were rejected, we were put out. We were the outsiders because we were not playing 'Ring My Bell.' We didn't have that 140 beats per minute."

The result was a decade of constant touring, as the band traveled the country reprising their greatest hits without a record contract.

"People wanted to hear 'Spill the Wine,' we played 'Spill the Wine' but we played it different every night," recalled Scott.

In 1989, percussionist Papa Dee Allen — one of the band's original members — died on stage while playing the intro to War's hit "Gypsy Woman." It was another blow, but the band played on.

The band no longer performs the song.

By the early '90s, another generation of musicians had discovered the band. Rappers "Rap De La Soul" was a collection of rap stars such as Ice-T, the Beastie Boys and De La Soul who had used War samples in their songs; it was released in 1992.

While the album stirred renewed interest in the band, Brown said the band is troubled by some of the messages sent out by rap artists deni-grating women or advocating cop killing.

"Our feeling is this: We say humbug to those people who say, 'Our music is not responsible for that guy blowing that guy's head off,'" Brown said.

"We've had people come up to us time after time and give testimony to us and say, 'Do you know that your music changed my life?'"

Scott nodded in assent. "Those are the words."

The message on "Peace Sign" is, obviously, a socially conscious one. "What if" wonders what the world would be like without guns and drugs; "Homeless Hero" lays out the plight of the Vietnam veteran. Old friend Jose Feliciano adds Spanish vocals to "East L.A.," Brown's son, Rae Valentine, has joined the band as a keyboardist.

"When I look at my son, I'm seeing what's going to take place when I'm gone," Brown said. "War is one of those bands — we're concerned about the family. And not only our families — we're trying to encourage other families to come together."

But they wouldn't be War if they hadn't kept a sense of humor. The discussion turns to cities where War tour dates led the mayors to declare days of peace this year.

Brown, pondering this, has an idea. All these people from all these cities should gather in Washington, D.C., for a giant rally.

"I think Martin Luther King done that. It didn't work," Scott interjected. "All the farmers went to Washington. That didn't work. This time, take care of your problems at home! Save the bus fare! Listen to our album at home in peace."

"It was a well-made film," Kristofferson still insists. "It was done in for a lot of reasons, but none for what the film was about."

In recent years, Kristofferson has hooked up with buddies Willie Nelson, Johnny Cash and Waylon Jennings — The Highwaymen.

Eventually, Kristofferson's parents,

"My dad said he realized nobody could have ever told him to fly, and (music) was just something he didn't understand," Kristofferson said.

Through the years, Kristofferson's political interests have run hot and cold. He was excited about Ross Perot, and disillusioned by the Democratic Congress' support of the Gulf War.

"I'm really not very good at politics," he said. "The old labels don't work anymore."

When asked how he feels about having a Rhodes Scholar as president, he said, with a chuckle, "It's definitely a step up, but we still have a long way to go."

These days, Kristofferson said he feels most in tune with people who support human rights.

He also talked about overcoming a drinking problem.

"It wasn't a problem for me — it got me through a lot of things — but you can't continue when you get older," he said. "God knows I'm not a saint today, but I don't get drunk anymore."

He added, "It's a desire to be pleasant around my kids."

Downtown Twin Falls schedules Chalkwalk/Kidfest

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Chalk ready? Then get creative.

The Downtown Business Improvement District will sponsor its annual Chalkwalk/Kidfest — Idaho Scapes '94 — Saturday on Main Avenue.

Beginning at 10 a.m. in front of the First Interstate Bank building, young artists will begin drawing. There will be separate divisions for preschool, kids 6-9, youngsters 10-13 and for those 14-18.

There will also be a professional division, the winner of which will collect a $100 prize.

In the top of the youth divisions, the top prize is $20. The runner-up gets $10.

Entry forms are available at all merchants downtown or by calling 733-3434.

Besides the art, there will be music. Scott Guinn, a Boise-based ventriloquist and magician, will present shows at noon and 2:30 p.m.

At 12:30 p.m., the Bureau of Land Management will present Smoky Bear and a fire safety program, while at 1:30 p.m., Ryo-Bu-Kai with Karol will perform.

At 2 p.m., there will be a demonstration by the Magic Valley Safe Kids Coalition and Idaho Power Co., and a 3-variety group demonstrations.

Winners of the drawing contest will be announced at 4 p.m.

'Beethoven's 2nd' walks onto local video shelves

The Times-News
New videos in Twin Falls stores this week:

'Beethoven's 2nd' (G) This movie pulls no punches.

It establishes its essence with the very first image it projects — an extreme close-up of dog's nose, huge, flat, pulsing, quivering, snoring, seeping. The camera just stays there, like Sherlock Holmes' magnifying glass, letting the viewer contemplate those flaring, oozing nostrils. It's a clue, all right: Hey, this is a movie about a dog.

Following the success of the 1992 original "Beethoven," the sequel is Hollywood filmmaking at its most undisguised ("They liked a movie about a St. Bernard so let's give 'em a movie about a bunch of St. Bernards"). When last we left the Newtons — the perfect name for this quintessentially nuclear family — Mom and the three kids were hopelessly in love with big ol' brown-eyed Beethoven while curmudgeonly Dad heaped deep, weary sighs. Apparently, Dad (Charles Grodin) has come around, because as the movie opens we find the Newtons as one big happy family with one member who just happens to be huge and furry.

No, the problem these days is that spring is in the air, and as Beethoven takes his daily romp through the park (an unleashed St. Bernard running through a park — isn't that everybody's favorite sight?), he sees love blooming all around him and feels a certain longing stir. As luck would have it, he almost immediately spies a beautiful purebred St. Bernard (wouldn't you get into cross-breeding, would we?). With a pink ribbon atop her (huge) head and answering to the name of Missy, she is perfect. Beethoven, it would seem, likes an old-fashioned gal, though not so old-fashioned that they can't immediately have four puppies.

Unfortunately, Missy is caught up in a messy divorce in which her loving owner/daddy is being stretched on the rack by his raging shrew of an ex-wife who is using Missy to force him to pay up. So the doggy lovers are separated, and the Newton household suddenly has four new members, which Mom (Bonnie Hunt) and the kids are determined to keep secret from glowering Pop. Of course, living with five St. Bernards is like living with five ponies, so it doesn't take Dad long to catch on.

Under the aegis of Ivan Reitman ("Ghostbusters," "Dave"), "Beethoven's 2nd" displays a keen sense of comedic timing and a certain over-the-top whimsy (the opening fantasy sequence, in which Beethoven dreams of meat) that, along with Charles Grodin's simpering, keeps this movie from sinking altogether. But then, this is a comedy about a dog who is funny in large part because he drools so much, so you can't expect miles. With the likes of Beethoven and contemporaries such as Hooch, it is interesting that we as a culture seem to have decided that what is funniest about dogs is also what is grossest. Gone are the days of sleek Lassie, graceful Old Yeller, cute-as-a-button Benji; in their place we have Luzu Trooper-sized drool factories. Whatever else is going on in the Newton household, you can't help but wonder what that place must smell like.

Another element impinging on the movie's good-natured sense of fun is the arch rendering of the evil ex-wife. As Regina, Debra Mazar ("Goodfellas") is plainly camping it up, and her character (not mention lengthy stretches of the storyline) seem to be borrowed from "101 Dalmatians" Cruella DeVille. But this isn't a cartoon, it is a children's film, and the stereotyping at work here is excessive and insulting. The classic portrait of an ex-wife in Hollywood, in other words; that world-of-trophy-wives-and-prom-nial agreements. (Dallas Morning News) (Video West, Blockbuster)

"Intersection" (R) Mark Rydell's last movie, "For the Boys," was a critical bomb that never really grabbed a significant audience. With "Intersection" it looks like Rydell — who distinguished himself with such movies as "On Golden Pond," "The River" and "The Rosendales" — is on a downward spiral.

Rydell can't take all the blame for "Intersection" — there's a trite screenplay and inferior performances by Sharon Stone and Richard Gere.

Gere certainly was miscast as Vincent Eastman, an award-winning architect married to his business partner, Sally (Stone). The carefree, sexy spark that leaves some marriages early on has fizzled. Sally has become a workaholic whose ambitiousness and enthusiasm are more tied to the firm than to her marriage.

Bored and confused, Vincent leaves Sally and their daughter, Meghan (Jenny Morrison), for a vivacious and sexy magazine writer Olivia (Lolita Davidovich).

But Vincent is incapable of making a commitment to Olivia. Part of him is still attached to Sally. Almost as a symbol of his indecision, he leaves his car parked at his wife's home and must go there in order to drive. It also doesn't help that Sally is in the office with him. And when it comes to company social events, he excludes Olivia.

Caught in the middle of course is the 13-year-old Meghan, who nevertheless manages to balance Daddy's girlfriend and Mommy's natural hostilities.

It all comes to a head for Vincent when Olivia, heady on too much wine, crashes the opening of a new museum that the firm has designed. Sally is there. The two women meet, and Vincent erupts in fury at Olivia. After dropping her off in the rain, he drives around for the rest of the night, winding up sleeping in his car outside a diner.

He's written Olivia a goodbye letter and is about to mail it when he meets a little girl who has the same flashing red hair as Olivia. He tucks the letter into his jacket and leaves a message on Olivia's answering machine to meet him at a romantic country hotel. He loves her and wants to marry her.

Exhilarated by his decision and in a rush to meet Olivia, Vincent speeds along a mountainous two-lane road and breaks too late when he sees a stalled van. He does a 360 just as a tractor-trailer roars into view in the lane ahead.

This is how the movie opens — with the accident. Even if you fall asleep during this movie, which is pretty easy to do, you still know how it's going to end.

If "Intersection" has one bright hope, it's Davidovich. She's a joy and a natural; and when she's on screen, you realize just how thin the acting abilities of Stone and Gere really are.

Gere comes across more so as a cad than a tortured man at a crossroads in his life. He offers little emotional confusion; the inner frustration is complicated but eludes Gere in his one-note performance.

Marin Landau doesn't have much to do, but manages to put in an able supporting performance as Neal, a close family friend and partner in the architectural firm. Morrison is fine as the daughter.

But Stone fans are in for a disappointment: She doesn't take off her clothes. There are no hot moments here. Instead, Stone is required to ... emot. Good luck. (Associated Press) (Blockbuster, Video West)

"Lightning Jack" (PG). Paul Hogan tries to reincarnate his Crocodile Dundee character in this comedy Western. As a bumbling crook who years to be a famous outlaw, he leaves a lot to be desired. Gooding Jr. to rob banks. Renters hoping for a lively, Dundee-quality action comedy will be disappointed. (Knight-Ridder Newspapers) (Video West, Great American Video)

Younger singers toss their hats into country/pop music ring

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Watching videos on Country Music Television, Kenny Chesney had a revelation: He needed to switch from black cowboy hats to white.

In an hour I counted eight artists with black hats," Chesney, 26, said in an interview. "There was Clay Walker, Tracy Lawrence, Mark Chesnut, Tracy Byrd, John Anderson — there's a lot of them, probably 20."

"I thought, 'Man, what makes you any different than that bunch?'"

Nashville notes

There are indeed a heap of country hunkers these days, wearing a rainbow of hats. And as the field gets crowded, singers with lots in common look for ways to stand out.

Some may try by changing hat colors, but others try by going beyond the country crowd and crossing over to pop. Just look at such stars as Garth Brooks and Alan Jackson.

A new generation in their 20s, led by John Michael Montgomery and Tim McGraw, also are breaking through to pop gold. Both Montgomery and McGraw have edged in on Michael Bolton's turf with dramatic love ballads, to notable success. Chesney, who debut album, "For My Wildest Dreams," is noticeably aggressive, has yet to crossover to pop.

Since Brooks revealed his debt to such rock acts as Kiss and Billy Joel, it's become OK for younger country singers to admit that there was more than George Jones and Hank Williams on their turntables as teen-agers.

Montgomery sang a lot of Lionel Richie and Kenny Rogers songs in Kentucky clubs, while Chesney liked Bob Seger and Hank Williams Jr. as a youngster growing up in East Tennessee.

But all of the younger stars, including Brooks, cite George Strait (a black hat man) as the man who made country cool. Ironically, Strait himself has never made much of a dent in the pop world.

McGraw has a song called "Give It to Me Strait" on his album, a testimonial to "a lot of good experiences with George Strait music — some I can't talk about."

Says Montgomery: "George Strait was one of the guys that I really was intrigued with the most. I really thought he was the coolest."

The crossover hits tend to be either power ballads or novelties. The Smith wouldn't touch such as Billy Ray Cyrus' "Achy Breaky Heart" or McGraw's "Indian Outlaw."

Montgomery, 29, almost always wears a black hat. He had just gotten established as a country star when his smash ballad, "I Swear," went No. 1 on the country and pop charts. A subsequent version of "I Swear" by R&B group All-4-One also topped the pop charts.

He's still a little dazed at the pace, and struggling to handle the pressures of platinum-level stardom.

"We're as popular as a pop and rock artist — nowadays," Montgomery said. "I have a lot of guilty feelings this year because I'm turning down much more stuff than I did last year."

"And it's just that everything has quadrupled since last year — not only the album sales, but also the people that want to interview you whatever," he said.

"There's so many things out there that people want a piece of my time for. And being successful and the position I'm in, you always feel like you owe that to somebody."

McGraw, son of former New York Mets and Philadelphia Phillies reliever Tug McGraw, also has had major pop success with the No. 1 "Indian Outlaw" and ballad "Don't Take the Girl," which made it to No. 8 on the pop charts and No. 1 on the country charts. Before "Indian Outlaw," McGraw sometimes was playing to audiences of 50 people. "Things have started cruising along a lot faster," he said. "It's nice to be playing to a big crowd of people."

A new generation of 20-year-old country singers like Tim McGraw, top, and Kenny Chesney, above, are following the platinum stars and breaking into pop gold.

Big success can breed big problems. McGraw found, when "Indian Outlaw" was protested by some American Indians. They took offense to such lyrics as:

"Well you can find me in the wigwam, I'll be beatin' on my tom tom, pull out my peace pipe and smoke some, and pass it on down the line."

McGraw says he never anticipated the song would be protested. "I didn't expect nothing like stuff like that, because it wasn't meant derogatory," he said.

"It's an attitude, and that's all it was ever meant to be." He's got another one called, "Refried Dreams" that may not thrill Mexicans. But a little controversy never hurt anyone, and nobody mistakes him for Tracy Lawrence anymore.

Chesney still occasionally runs into fans who think he's singer Rick Trevino, but he's keeping his chin up.

"Shoot, I'm not letting that bother me," Chesney said. "I spend all my time worrying about Tim McGraw and Clay Walker and Ken Mellon and what everybody else is doing. Kenny Chesney ain't gonna get nothing done."

"Maybe one of these ballads like 'When She Calls Me Baby' might could cross over," he speculates. "That'd be great."

"I'm kinda too country maybe, for that."

Gooding County Fair mounts up for 6-day run

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

GOODING — Rodeo's always been at the heart of the Gooding County Fair, and it's firmly in the saddle again this year.

The Gooding fair, home of the Miss Teen Rodeo Idaho Pageant, begins its six-day run on Monday with a 4-H horse fair at the Andy James Arena. The horse fair continues Tuesday, with cattle team-penning planned for 7 p.m.

On Wednesday, the 4-H fair begins, followed by opening ceremonies for the Miss Teen Rodeo Idaho Pageant at 8 p.m. at Gooding High School.

On Thursday, which is Wendell Day, the 4-H and open-class fair events continue, with community games and the carnival opening at noon. Free stage shows begin at 2 p.m. and a kids' steer roping contest is scheduled for 3 p.m.

The kiddie parade starts at 4:30 p.m. down Main Street, followed by the adult parade at 5 p.m. The first go-round of the Internation Professional Rodeo Association-sanctioned rodeo begins at 8 p.m. in the Gooding County Fairgrounds arena, to be followed by a dance from 9:30 to 11 p.m. on the free stage.

On Friday, Bliss-Hagerman day, the 4-H fair and open-class fair events continue, with the carnival opening at noon. Live entertainment begins on a free stage at 2 p.m., as does the roping club horse show in the Andy James Arena. The second go-round of the rodeo is slated for 8 p.m., with a dance to follow at 9:30.

On Saturday, Gooding Day at the fair, the 4-H/Future Farmers of America rodeo show will begin at 9:30 a.m., followed by barbecue at 11:30 a.m. at the fairgrounds. The carnival and local talent on the free stage will begin at 1:30 p.m.

A dance will follow on the free stage at 9:30 p.m.

A 130 p.m. Draft horse play-day starts at 2 in the Andy James arena, with an auto extraction demonstration by the Gooding Fire Department planned at 3 p.m.

A diaper derby — a baby race — will be held at 4 p.m. at the free stage, with a live auction of woods sculptures at 6:30 p.m.

At 8, the final go-round of the rodeo will begin, highlighted by the crowning of the 1993 Miss Teen Rodeo Idaho by the current queen, Christyln Detmer of Hagerman.

A dance will follow on the free stage at 9:30 p.m.

Waking up worth it with rooster

DEAR ABBY: I have been reading your column since before my son was born, so I know it's been more than 35 years. In all that time, I've been amused, surprised, offended and entertained, according to my own assessment of your handling of various subjects. Most of the time I commend the accuracy, wit, sage advice, compassion and genuine down-to-earth logic I've seen in your responses.

Regarding the subject of crowing roosters: When I was a kid, one of my greatest pleasures was being awakened at dawn by "Old Harry" — our rooster. Then we'd come down to the kitchen to find breakfast ready, and the welcoming smiles of Momma and Dad at the table.

Dear Abby
Abigail
VanBuren

Today, I have an alarm clock in the shape of a rooster, which crows at the appointed alarm setting. When the alarm is shut off, it says, "Good morning!" I call that alarm clock "the New Harry."

I am certain that amid the flurry of this workaday world, there are a horde of people who still enjoy hearing a rooster crow, as opposed to hearing the infernal buzzing or sudden blaring of the radio's wake-up alarm.

After experiencing life as it is, to hear "New Harry" each morning is as much a comfort as it is to wake up. I'd rather hear a rooster than another commentary on rising crime.

— JAMES W. BRANDEN,
SAN DIEGO

DEAR JAMES BRANDEN: So would I. And since you can't smuggle down past a rooster, please write again and tell me where I can buy one of those clocks. Thank you!

DEAR ABBY: I recently met a man who is very nice and caring. He would be the dream of any woman, but there is one problem: his teeth. They really are terrible. I am sure he hasn't seen a dentist in years. Or he may have never seen a dentist in his entire life.

Abby, how do you politely tell a person he needs to get his teeth fixed — or else get false ones?

I think he has a romantic interest in me but, under the circumstances, I can't bring myself to kiss him. I am a faithful "Dear Abby" reader.

DEAR FAITHFUL READER: Tell this man the truth: "You really need to see a dentist. If you don't have a dentist, let me introduce you to mine."

DEAR ABBY: Re the difficulty in remembering names although the face is familiar:

I extend my hand in greeting and say, "I'm Leland Hammerschmitt" (my real name). Then the other party, visibly relieved, does the same. It works every time.

HAMMERSCHMITT, OJAI, CALIF.
DEAR ABBY: About the "Doctor" thing: When I meet a pompous donkey at a social occasion, and he or she is introduced as "Charles (or Charlotte) Brown," and then says, "It's DOCTOR Brown," I usually say, "How nice ... I also have a doctorate, but my friends call me 'Judge.'" That usually slows them down to a walk!

GLENN'S FERRY - The annual Three Island Crossing re-entertainment is planned for Saturday. Festivities begin with an all-equestrian parade at 7 p.m. today, followed by a cowboy poetry reading at 8 p.m. at the Three Island State Park. The evening concludes with a dance at 9 p.m. with music by Desperado. Cost for the dance is $2 for adults and $1 for children.

Breakfast will be served from 6 to 10 a.m. at the park. Cost is $3.50 for adults and $3 for children. Opening ceremonies are set for 10 a.m., with the actual river crossing at 11 a.m. A barbecue is planned for noon. Cost for the barbecue is $5 for adults and $3 for children. Free entertainment will be provided from 1 to 5 p.m.

Elks Club sponsors Hawaiian Luau

JEROME - The second annual Hawaiian Luau, sponsored by the Jerome Elks Club, will be held Saturday night.

The event is scheduled from 6 to 9 p.m. on the patio of the Elks Lodge across from Ridley's IGA. The menu will include roast pig with all the trimmings.

Cost is $7.50 per person. Tickets are available at the Elks Lodge at 324-9928, or by calling Jerry Cook at 324-2428.

Yearbook-signing party set for Monday

JEROME - The 1994 Jerome High School yearbook signing party will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Monday at the high school.

For those unable to attend that night, books may be picked up from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday in the high school office. All students should bring their receipts with them.

Astronomical Society will view stars

BRUNEAU - The Boise Astronomical Society will sponsor its 10th annual Southern Idaho Regional Star Party tonight and Saturday at BrunEAU Dunes State Park.

The park, which is located 20 miles south of Mountain Home, is a good location for viewing the night sky. The guest speaker at 6:30 p.m. Saturday will be Gilbert Ford, retired physicist and professor of astronomy at Northwest Nazarene College. Ford will speak on the Keck telescope.

Activities will begin at 9:45 tonight with a star party. On Saturday, there will be a meeting of the astronomical society, followed by a swap meet at 4 p.m., a barbecue at 5 and another star party at 9:30 p.m.

To reach the park, take Exit 112 off Interstate 84 and go through Hammett on Idaho Highway 78. Watch for the BrunEAU sign on the left.

Watercolor workshop featured Rainey

HAGERMAN - The Idaho Watercolor Society will present a summer workshop featuring Rhonda Rainey today through Sunday at the Nature Conservancy's Thousand Springs Preserve on Miller Island in the Snake River.

Rainey is an accomplished artist who lives and works in the Pocatello area. She attended Ricks College in Rexburg, Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, Idaho State University in Pocatello and the University of Oregon in Eugene. She has participated in solo exhibits and group shows and has won several awards. Her paintings are included in both private and corporate collections worldwide.

A potluck dinner opens the event at 6:30 p.m. today.

An open talk session is set for 7:30 p.m.

Saturday's events begin at 9 a.m. with a painting demonstration, followed by a painting session from 10:30 a.m. to noon, lunch from noon to 1 p.m. and painting from 1 to 2 p.m. A critique and question/answer session is planned for 2 to 3:30 p.m. The remainder of the afternoon and evening is set aside for painting and socializing.

A potluck dinner will be served at 6 p.m.

The event continues with a demonstration and open painting beginning at 9 a.m. Sunday.

All participants should bring regular painting items, a palette, paint brushes, choice of watercolor paper, a small bottle of white gesso, acrylic mat medium (Daniel Smith liquitex), old bubble, a small spray bottle, a small natural sponge, sketch books, camera and film. For the potluck meals, those attending should bring a dish to share and their own beverage and table service, and everyone is responsible for providing their own lunch and breakfast.

The preserve has room for camping with tents and recreational vehicles. Other activities available include swimming at Sligars's Natural Hot Springs, river boat tours and the Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument.

Cost for the workshop is $15 per person, plus a $5 per vehicle donation to the Nature Conservancy. For more information, call Joyce DeFord at 326-4938, Evelyn Slater at 326-4419 or Rainey at 234-2841.

Dill will be featured artist at Metropolis

TWIN FALLS - Folksinger Sylvia Dill will be the featured artist at this month's Evening at the Met, set for 7 to 9 p.m. today at the Metropolis Cafe, 125 Main Ave. E.

Dill is native Idahoan and was raised in a musical family. Her father played guitar, fiddle, and her mother played piano and accordion. The family of seven children held weekly jam sessions featuring fiddles, banjos, guitars, mandolins, accordions and piano.

Dill's main interest was folksinging, and she took up piano and guitar to accompany herself. She attended college for three years, sang professionally and traveled with a band for five years, then returned to college and earned a degree in music education. She has been teaching music for the past seven years and is currently a teacher at Horizon Elementary School in Jerome.

Dill's husband Randy and her children, Sarah, Aaron and Jeff, and their horses are her main priority, but singing remains a passion in her life. She is available for singing engagements and can be reached at 324-8125.

Final interpretive program set today

HAGERMAN - The 1994 summer interpretive program season concludes today.

The final program is a half-hour slideshow about skunks. Those interested in learning about the life of a skunk should meet at 9:30 p.m. at the picnic shelter. Admission is free, and the public is invited.

Fossil beds offer tour of horse quarry

HAGERMAN - A tour to the famous horse quarry at the Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument is planned for Saturday.

The tour is designed for individuals, couples and families. It includes an on-site visit to the quarry where the state fossil, the now-extinct Hagerman Horse, was discovered. A park ranger will discuss the history of the site, the present-day scientific importance and the status of the monument.

Participants should meet at 8:45 a.m. at the National Park Service office across from Hagerman High School on Highway 30. Those attending should be prepared for variable weather conditions and possible wind. Bring a vehicle suitable for dirt farm roads which may sometimes be muddy. Wear sturdy shoes as the tour requires some hiking on a dusty trail with at least one fairly steep position.

For more information, call 837-4793.

Marsalis concert postponed to Aug. 21

SUN VALLEY - The jazz concert with Branford Marsalis planned for Sunday has been postponed until Aug. 21.

The concert will be held at 6:30 p.m. Aug. 21 on the Trail Creek Cabin grounds. Cost is $18 for adults and $6 for children ages 12 and under for those who are not members of the Sun Valley Center. Tickets are available at Sun Valley area ticket outlets or by calling 726-9491.

Sawtooth offers final session this week

SUN VALLEY - The Sawtooth Science Institute's final offering for the summer will be held this week.

"Riparian, River and Lake Ecology," with biologists Bruce Lium, Howard Gross and Geoff Steinhart and author Tim Palmer, is planned for Tuesday through Friday in Stanley and Ketchum.

Credit is offered through the College of Arts and Sciences and the College of Education at Idaho State University. The workshop may also be attended without credit. Cost is $30 per day ($25 for early registration); credit is additional.

For more information, call Chris Gentschen at 788-9668.

Barnes will present Art Guild program

TWIN FALLS - The Art Guild of Magic Valley will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Twin Arts Studio in the U-Haul Center, 1757 Kimberly Road.

Robyn Barnes will present the program entitled "The Connection of the Arts."

Northside begins 'Oliver!' rehearsals

TWIN FALLS - Casting is complete and rehearsals are under way for the Northside Playhouse's production of "Oliver!"

"Oliver!" will be presented at 8 p.m. daily, Sept. 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17 at the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center. Tickets will go on sale the last week of August and will be available at the Natural Way Health Store and Larson Arts in downtown Twin Falls, Andrew's Hallmark in the Magic Valley Mall and Artene's Flower Garden in Jerome. Tickets may also be purchased from cast members or by calling 734-1602.

Hundreds of music fans jam the highway leading to Bethel, N.Y., as they leave the Woodstock Music and Art Fair on Aug. 16, 1969.

Knight-Ridder News Service

So who said Woodstock wasn't a business venture?

A web of mythology has spun from the original music festival in 1969. For instance, some said a baby was born there, but no such record exists, and neither the parents nor the child has stepped forward.

But the notion that Woodstock was designed as a not-for-profit proposition is a myth that has proliferated and has been the foundation for numerous criticisms of Woodstock '94. This weekend's 25th anniversary celebration in Saugerties, N.Y. The logic goes: that Woodstock was about peace, love, music and social revolution; this one is about Pepsi, MTV, money and more money.

It's an inviting slam, who doesn't want to take a shot at a bunch of rich guys who want to pack a quarter-million people onto a field, take $135 from each of them and then forbid them to bring food and beverages?

The reality is that Woodstock '69 was about money, too. It certainly became something much more — but only after the 500,000 or however many people were there crawled out of the mud and began to understand its significance. More than a rock 'n' roll concert, it embodied every bit of the late '60s hippie, counterculture rhetoric.

In a field in upstate New York, the Woodstock audience formed a peaceful, loving and supportive community that endured — and was probably even strengthened by — hardships such as heavy rains and food shortages.

Of course, there are some who think even that was a myth. "There's a great deal made of the fact that 400,000 people came together on a rainy, muddy weekend and no one was killed and that that was a marvelous thing," says David Strauss, a history professor at Kalamazoo College. "People extrapolated that into all kinds of promise. What it really was was a peaceful, three-day weekend.

That's hardly the basis of a change in society."

However, Woodstock organizers never intended to make a statement. They were after profits.

The original Woodstock came together when two young entrepreneurs, John Roberts and Joel Rosenman, were introduced to ambitious music promoters Michael Lang and Artie Kornfeld, then an employee of Capitol Records. The pitch was to build a recording studio and retreat in Woodstock, N.Y., which had become a favorite haunt for hip musicians.

"We wanted to build a place so that Bob Dylan and his neighbors could record locally instead of going to Manhattan," Rosenman, 51, remembers.

The concert was an item on the Lang and Kornfeld's business plan marked Concert/Press Party. That caught the other organizers' fancy; it took on a life of its own, and no Woodstock hideaway was ever built.

The festival ran well over budget — and put the partners into debt. They recovered by licensing the Woodstock logo and selling rights to the film.

The four organizers spent many months in court haggling over their shares of the proceeds. Apparently the grudges have washed away over 25 years. Lang, Roberts and Rosenman are once again at the Woodstock helm. "Propelling us forward is the feeling of having produced the '69 festival. That's a pretty heady feeling," Rosenman explains. "You are compelled to do it again."

And they're doing it in a more financially secure manner than before. The Woodstock principals have joined forces with the massive PolyGram conglomerate, assuring a ready bankroll for a better organized and more technologically advanced festival.

The $33-million budget is well on its way to being recouped. Ticket sales — at just over 162,000 now — have already brought in $21.9 million. Pepsi signed on for a $2-million sponsorship. Pay-per-view broadcasters are expecting up to $50,000. Woodstock-wanna-bes are expected to pay $50,000 to catch the weekend's action at home — a potential $22.5-million take.

On top of that are souvenir sales — at the festival and via cable home shopping networks — as well as an album this fall, a feature film in winter 1995 and a home video.

So Woodstock '94 organizers seem assured a profit this time around. It's being operated in a businesslike fashion — and perhaps that's what is bugging the festival's naysayers.

Michael Waldfiehl, who directed the "Woodstock" movie and this year put out a special director's cut, has also been a vocal critic, pushing festival co-producers Roberts over the top.

"Mike Waldfiehl is the single individual who probably made the most money out of Woodstock '69, and he has now returned to bury his snout in the trough again," Roberts wrote to festival officials. "Waldfiehl represents a cadre of aging, embittered hippies who are waging war on this generation because — they are selfishly hoping that this generation doesn't get to have a great rock 'n' roll party."

The party is all the Woodstock '94 organizers claim to be selling this weekend. Nobody wants to predict a repeat of the utopian experience of '69. "I can't tell you that lightning will strike twice," says co-producer John Scher. "All you can do is try to give people the best event you possibly can and hope lightning strikes twice."

Rosenman says: "The only thing our audience cares about is the same thing they cared about in 1969 — 'Who's playing' and 'How do I get there?'"

David Strauss, Kalamazoo College history professor

Earthquakes favor December

A lengthy study of the world's major earthquakes since A.D. 526 indicates December is the month they've most frequently occurred, especially on Dec. 16th and 17th.

Q. What's "voluntary manslaughter"?

A. The legal term for killing with a modified intent of evil, such as homicide committed in either rage or terror.

Q. Do you ever have the right to keep money you find? Forsters put that query to a sampling of souls in Norway, and 77 percent said, No, never.

Q. Can't the people of Singapore be fined if convicted of failing to say "please" and "thank you"?

A. Never heard that, but they're encouraged to say such when appropriate during August, Singapore's official Courtesy Month.

Who remembers the heroic fued made by Boston socialite Harriet Hemenway? No many, if any. A pioneer environmentalist, she. Rampant in the last half of the previous century was the killing of birds for feathers so much in demand by makers of women's hats. It was Harriet who raised such a ruckus about the town slaughter that legislators finally passed laws to stop it.

Q. Did you ever find out why Nevada once had prostitution in Las Vegas and Reno but not elsewhere in the state?

A. Gaming researchers learned tourists bet more money when husbands brought wives.

Contrary to widespread erroneous report, Russia, not Canada, is the country that covers the most land, according to the World Almanac.

Q. Other men get good lather with gel shaving cream. Why can't I?

A. Do you leave detergent soap suds on your face before you apply the gel? Experts say that may inhibit lathering of gel, though not of foam. It's a common complaint, they say, among men who start the daily shave with faces soap-sudsy instead of just wet.

Horoscope

IF AUGUST 11 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Many who feel they understand you could be sadly mistaken. You are a bundle of contradictions — domestic yet hungering for changes, for the unorthodox, family-oriented but constantly in search of adventure. You are an excellent cook, you are sensual, aware of controversy, are provocative, glamorous in a subtle kind of way.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Refine techniques, gain allies among those who don't necessarily agree with everything you do. Focus on partnership, credit rating, marital status.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emphasis on basic issues, pets, fitness employment, ability to solve perplexing emotional problem. Be aware of time limitation, accept challenge of added responsibility. Money due!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Long-distance call verifies views, elevates mystic, relates to possible journey overseas. Libra moon highlights romance, creativity, variety, children, challenge.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Pounce on new opportunity! Darker corners of your life receive benefit of greater light. Value of property confirmed, large charge, imprint style, lead the way.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Intuitive insight on target, adhere to unorthodox procedures. Relative who "whines" signaling, "I need your attention and love!" Aquarius, another Leo figure in scenario.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stress individuality, highlight talent relating to voice, drama, music. Financial picture bright, apparent loss will be transformed into profit. Missing ingredient, link will be located.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Cycle high, you move in right direction, goal is in sight, new love on horizon. Hold your ground, don't be intimidated by belittling individual. Check property value, hold tight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Secret message gets into your hands via unorthodox methods. You see and learn what you were not supposed to see — be quiet, discretion is better part of valor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accuse, hamper, diplomatically, pursue gift for loved one — art object, luxury item, tickets to musical comedy. Many of your desires fulfilled in "sensational" manner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Individual who "left town" returns unexpectedly. Emphasis on self-esteem, career, standing in community. You might hear these words, "I could not bear to stay away!" Places person involved.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You'll be asked to work "overtime." Emphasis on social responsibility, personal deadline, intense controversial relationship. Libra moon highlights education, travel, philosophy.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Check accounting procedure, go down your list, be critical, refuse to be intimidated by those who know price of everything and value of nothing.

Looking for an easy way to make a buck, Bones Conway (Paul Shore, center) joins the Army Reserves to capitalize on the great prices, like getting a check from Uncle Sam for working only one weekend a month. What he and his pals, left to right, Jack (Andy Dick), Christine (Lori Petty) and Fred (David Alan Grier) don't count on however, is getting called up for an actual mission.

Paul Shore shoots Army-movie cliches from 'In the Army Now'

Chicago Tribune

Paul Shore may be the latest phenomenon of the TV channel-surfers' age: the inexplicable star. His newest movie, "In the Army Now," is pretty inexplicable, too. It's a multi-megaton debacle spraying comedy-cliche clichés at us like a maniac with a giant water gun.

With his morose eyes and dull, expressionless face, whiney voice and air of watchful lethargy, plus all his buzzed out L.A. stoner-surfer dude-speak ("chill," "buff," "crusty"), Shore's image was the opposite of the shiny-eyed, over-the-top personality kids on television — which is probably why he became a star on MTV. Kids intimidated by TV's cult of empty good looks could relate to Shore's empty pseudo-homeliness, his what-the-hell, eccentric spontaneity. They could tell themselves: "Hey, that's kind of like me."

But is that any reason Shore should be making huge, vacuous Hollywood star-vehicles like "Son in Law" and "In the Army Now"?

In the long line of wacky-comedy-in-the-army shows — Bob Hope in "Caught in the Draft," Abbott and Costello as "Buck Privates," Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis in "At War With the Army" — this must be near the bottom. You could probably have more fun chewing bubble gum for an entire evening than you can watching this movie — even if you ended up swallowing the gum.

"In the Army Now" is shamelessly dopey and opportunistic. A warmed-over trash-tub of Army humor clichés that includes jokes about Shore's character, Bones Conway, peeling a mountain of potatoes, falling in mudholes, pulling out a grenade pin and throwing the pin instead of the grenade, offering to wrestle with sexy female drill sergeants and firing his anti-missile blaster with the barrel pointed backward. There's even a mess hall food fight. It's the shame the writers here — all eight of them — couldn't recycle any drop-the-bayonet or tangled-in-the-parachute gags, or have Bones drive a tank backward while colonels and generals screamed at him.

The few likable things in "Army" — the occasional bursts of goofy sweetness from both Shore and sidekick Andy Dick — get buried in all the heavy-macho desert war antics. And why do Shore's writers include scenes where Bones jumps around in black underwear or tries to make love with his girlfriend in a stereo store? Are these the actions of a likable L.A. loser-nerd? (Maybe, if we believe this movie and "Wayne's World 2.")

Paul's "Army" starts out as fish-out-of-water satire, with Bones and Dick (Jack Kaufman) as a couple of stoned-acting stereo salesmen who join the Army Reserves to pay his rent. Then it turns into a "Police Academy"/"Private Benjamin" ripoff about boot camp and eventually throws the boys into combat in Libya as part of a water-purification team. (Some Political Correction team must have been at work here, too, because the villains are Libyans, we don't see much of them.)

The movie eventually develops a "Top Gun" recruiting poster side, Bones, Jack and their Rainbow squad — including a neurotic African-American named, inexplicably, Fred Ostroff (David Alan Grier) and macho lady recruit Christine (Lori Petty) — meld into a strong, tight, together unit, survive a desert ordeal and save the world from a SCUD attack.

This turnabout suggests a Pee-wee Herman army comedy in which Pee-wee turns into Rambo. And though it's not unusual for wacky-comic-in-the-army movies to have the clown win the war (as Charlie Chaplin did in 1918's "Shoulder Arms"), they don't often sport munitions as heavy as this one — which was shot with the Army's full cooperation. The effect is overkill: like Abbott and Costello making "Buck Privates" with the Joint Chiefs of Staff as military advisers.

There's no use discussing the acting in "Army." The movie's best performance is given by a camel. (It's not the cast's fault either. The camel has the best part.) And as for the writing, seven professional collaborators on this bomb of a script along with writer-director Daniel Petrie Jr. — four teams working in shifts, like the Manhattan Project — and they include the people responsible for "Johnny Be Good," "Toy Soldiers," "So I Married an Axe Murderer," "Three Men in a Cradle," "The Nerdies," "Last Resort" and "The Whoopie Boys."

If that doesn't scare you off — and it might not if you haven't seen those movies — writers Fax Bahr (co-director of "Hearts of Darkness") and Adam Small also co-wrote Shore's "Son-in-Law." And "Son-in-Law" was better than this.

Shore's TV fame came from playing himself in real-life situations. And that's exactly what he doesn't do in his last two movies — writers Fax Bahr (co-director of "Hearts of Darkness") and Adam Small also co-wrote Shore's "Son-in-Law." And "Son-in-Law" was better than this.

'Airheads:' The name says it all

Los Angeles Times

Movies playing in the Twin Falls area this weekend. Ratings are by the Motion Picture Association of America and reviews are by the Los Angeles Times.

"Airheads" (PG-13). Director Michael Lehmann shrugs off "Hudson Hawk" and offers up the weakly comic but interesting three metalheads who take a radio station hostage to get their record on the air. Brendan Fraser, Steve Buscemi, Adam Sandler and Chris Farley star (Twin Cinema).

"Angels in the Outfield" (PG). This Disney remake of a 1951 MGM baseball fantasy is best when its goofy, wacky when it's preachy. The 11-year-old Roger (Joseph Gordon-Levitt) sees angels where nobody else can. They help drive his favorite ball club, the California Angels, to pennant contention: Danny Glover stars as the Angels' gruff but snatch — kindly manager who begins to see things Roger's way. Enjoyable but uninspired (Motor-Vu Drive-In).

"Clear and Present Danger" (PG-13). Harrison Ford strikes again as CIA analyst Jack Ryan in the summer's most satisfying movie experience. Easily the best and most tightly wound of the three Tom Clancy novels brought to the screen, notable for the intricacy of its U.S. vs. Colombian drug lords plot and the movie's actors bring to characterization.

"The Client" (PG-13). Not particularly nuanced or finely tuned, this latest John Grisham novel to reach the screen benefits from fine starring performances from Susan Sarandon and Tommy Lee Jones. Though much of what is seen isn't particularly convincing, its story of an 11-year-old boy in mortal danger from the mob does have the trademark Grisham quality of making us care how it all turns out. (Twin Cinema)

"Forrest Gump" (PG-13). Director

Movie capsules

Robert Zemeckis uses the story of a holy fool whose IQ of 75 doesn't stop him from succeeding in life as a way to examine the turbulent recent decades of American history through a genially cracked lens. In part a lovely piece of work, with marvelous special effects and a solid performance from Tom Hanks, it stumbles when it forces its charm in search of obvious sentimentality and grand points about society (Mall Cinema).

"I Could Happen to You" (PG). Slight but charming comedy about a cop, played by Nicolas Cage, who gives his $4 million lottery earnings to a waitress, played by Bridget Fonda because he promised her a tip (sort of). These New Yorkers are so essentially good that their romance turns the film into a fable — a lot less scary than "Sleepless in Seattle." As Cage's wife, Rosie Perez does her chatterbox thing. Andrew Bergman directed with grace, if not much pizzazz. (Twin Cinema)

"The Lion King" (G). The sidekicks steal the show in the latest animated extravaganza from Disney. From a trio of laughing hyenas to a hysterical warthog-meerkat combination, they provide the energy and enthusiasm that the film's nominal center, the story of a young cub's growth to adulthood after the parents take note on-screen death of his father, cannot manage. (Twin Cinema)

"The Little Rascals" (PG). Those unforgettable knee-high characters have been recast for the '90s. Penelope Spheeris directs the brand-new exploits of Spanky, Alfalfa, Buckwheat, Darla and the rest of the gang. (Twin Cinema)

"Mask" (PG-13). Jim Carrey stars as a banal bank clerk who becomes a magical, charismatic hero when he dons an ancient mask. Industrial Light & Magic provides Carrey's scary shots. (Twin Cinema)

"North" (PG). Not really a shrewd judge of what audiences like, director Rob Reiner's instincts have led him astray in this feeble fantasy about an 11-year-old boy who decides he's too good for his parents and sets out to look for some new ones. As misbegotten as another project that spent years on a director's back burner, Barry Levinson's "Toys." (Motor-Vu Drive-In)

"Speed" (R). A crackjack action film with an intriguing premise: SWAT team stalwart Keanu Reeves must keep a Santa Monica bus from slowing down or it will explode. Though the drama is not to brag about, first time director Jan De Bont displays a true flair for action. Nothing here hasn't been done before, but De Bont and company make it feel fresh and exciting. (Grand-Vu Drive-In)

"True Lies" (R). Writer-director James Cameron certainly knows a lot about action, and the stunts in this Arnold Schwarzenegger epic about a secret agent whose work is a secret to his family are once again state of the art. But even though Cameron and company are also adept at the romantic spoof aspects of the story, the film suffers from a strain of crudeness and mean-spirited humiliation, especially toward women. Gorman: Tennis goes high-tech

By Julie M. McKinnon
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A lot has changed in professional tennis since Tom Gorman started playing tournaments in 1966.

Probably one of the biggest changes, however, has to do with the physical abilities of the players, who now condition regularly. At 6-foot, Gorman was one of the bigger players.

"I wish this was available in the mid-60s," said Gorman, waving his hands at the weight machines and other apparatus in the Family Physical Therapy & Sports Injury Clinic. "Now I'd be a midget in that locker room — not necessarily in height, but in stamina and strength."

Gorman was in Twin Falls to speak about mental preparation, strategy and tactics at Sports Medicine Seminar 1994 at the College of Southern Idaho. In conjunction with the seminar, the five-year Davis Cup player and eight-year Davis Cup captain also talked about "The State of Tennis Today" on Thursday night.

The annual seminar is designed to help coaches and educators identify and prevent sports injuries. It is sponsored by the clinic, Twin Falls Clinic & Hospital, CSI and Idaho State University.

Other topics at the seminar, which continues Saturday, include: heat stress, over-use injuries, asthma, allergies; skin disorders, cardiac disorders, medical/legal issues, physically impaired athletes, weight training, taping techniques, foot and ankle injuries, "runner's runs," and the "winning" balance among parents, coaches and athletes.

Professional tennis players now travel with trainers, Gorman said during an interview Thursday, and tournament sites have better facilities for those trainers.

"They're not just guys who give you a rubdown and ice afterwards," Gorman said.

Preventive medicine, rehabilitation, weight training and improved nutrition also now are taken advantage of by professional tennis players, he said.

"Players are much more in touch and aware of all of those opportunities," Gorman said.

Gorman said his tennis injury involved his back. When it was injured, muscles would spasm and he would have shooting pains down his leg.

Ex-pro assesses the game today

By Julie M. McKinnon
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If television viewers want more exciting men's tennis play at Wimbledon, then maybe officials should change the density of tennis balls used on grass, says a former tennis professional.

And one thing for certain, Tom Gorman said

Thursday, officials should not mess with the net height, line lengths or other rules of the game.

Men's tennis has been repeatedly criticized for its non-exciting play during Pete Sampras beat Goran Ivanisevic this year for his second straight Wimbledon title. There wasn't a rally longer than six shots during that power match.

"I love watching Pete Sampras play," said Gor-

Cuban basketball star seeks refugee status in Canada

HAMILTON, Ontario — Richard Matienzo, a 6-foot-6 center who leads the Cuban team in scoring in the World Championship of Basketball, is seeking refugee status in Canada, the Canadian Press reported Thursday.

Matienzo left the team after a practice Thursday morning in Toronto, sources told CP, although Cuba's coach said he has not seen the player since Wednesday night.

"He has been in contact with an immigration lawyer and right now he's making arrangements with Immigration Canada to turn himself in," Staff Sgt. John Silloats of the Metro Toronto police said.

Matienzo, 25, would likely apply for refugee status, Silloats said. A hearing would then be arranged on his application to stay in Canada.

Americans missing among names atop PGA tourney leaderboard

The Associated Press

TULSA, Okla. — Here we go again. Another major golf championship. Another gang of non-American golfers jamming the top of the leaderboard. At least this PGA Championship isn't over yet.

British Open winner Nick Price of Zimbabwe and Colin Montgomerie of Scotland were tied for the first-round lead Thursday at 3-under-par 67 over the rugged Southern Hills Country Club.

And just a stroke behind were U.S. Open winner Ernie Els of South Africa and 1991 Masters winner Ian Woosnam of Wales.

If the Americans are to salvage the last of this year's four major titles — and avoid a first-ever shutout in the grand slam events — they will have to overcome a fast start by some of the best golfers in the world.

That task right now falls to Phil Mickelson, the 24-year-old left-hander widely regarded as America's next great golfer, and Fred Couples, who was supposed to be America's next great golfer after he won the 1992 Masters.

Both were in the group with Els and Woosnam at 68.

"I would like to step up, sure," Mickelson said about America's search for a dominant golfer. "We're all trying. We're all out there working hard, practicing hard. The bottom line is there's better players throughout the world."

Couples, whose run to greatness was set back first by a distracting divorce and then, earlier this year, by a back injury, appears ready to emerge again after winning the Buick Open last week.

"I'm not intimidated by Colin Montgomerie, Ernie Els or Nick Price, just like I'm not intimidated by Tom Watson, Euzzy Zoeller or Loren Roberts," Couples said.

"We've got more foreigners playing in our tournaments now and they've showed they are capable of winning," he said. A record 36 foreign players are in the 151-player PGA field.

Knotted in a group at 69, two strokes back, were Watson, Roberts, Zoeller, Sam Torrance of Scotland, D.A. Weir, David Gifford of England, Raymond Floyd, Bruce Fleisher and Lance Wadkins. Watson has contended in all three majors this year only to shoot final-round 74s in each.

If Price should win this PGA Championship he would become the first golfer to win consecutive major championships since Watson won the U.S. and British Opens in 1982.

"I'm riding the crest of the wave and I'm having as much fun as I ever have and long may it last," Price said about the hot streak that has earned him three PGA Tour wins this year plus the British Open.

"It's a great leaderboard," he said. "It's got great foreign players and great American players. It should be a great finish on Sunday."

Montgomerie, who lost the U.S. Open to Els when he shot a miserable 78 in a playoff at Oakland in June, got out early and posted his 67 before Price and Els teed off. It held up until both Price and Els, playing together, birdied the 17th hole to go to three under par. But Els bogeyed No. 18 to fall a stroke behind. Couples birdied No. 18 to get to two under par.

Montgomerie drove the ball beautifully, hitting the thick, wiry Bermuda grass rough only once in a near-perfect round marred only by a couple of short birdie misses that could have made the score even lower.

He rolled in a 30-foot birdie putt on the first hole, then made nine consecutive pars, only one of which was at all testy, requiring a 5-foot saving putt on No. 8.

His par streak ended on No. 11 when he nearly made a 162-yard, 8-iron for a hole-in-one.

"It pitched dead on line in the hole," he said. "The pitch mark was half in the hole and I had to have a PGA official repair the cup before I could putt."

The ball clipped the cup on a fly, bounced off the pin and ended up 8 feet from the hole. Montgomerie made it to go 2-under and then birdied the par-5 13th to get to 3-under.

Paul Azinger, the defending PGA champion who is playing in just his second tournament in nine months after receiving treatments for cancer in his right shoulder, shot a 40 on the front nine and finished with a 75, eight strokes behind Montgomerie.

Judge rejects bar's plea to halt strike

The Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — A federal judge refused Thursday to stop the Major League Baseball Players' Association from striking, but set a hearing for next week on whether to halt the walkout.

U.S. District Judge Harvey Schlesinger denied a temporary restraining order sought by a sports bar and the president of a fans group to block the strike scheduled to begin after the games played on Thursday.

Schlesinger scheduled a hearing Aug. 19 on a request for a preliminary injunction seeking to order the "owners and players to conduct and play the remaining regular and postseason games, as scheduled."

Ellis Rubin, a Miami lawyer who filed the suit with his son, Mark, said, "In the immortal words of Yogi Berra, 'It ain't over until it's over.'"

Mark Rubin said the decision to hear the case shows that it wasn't a frivolous lawsuit, as some claimed.

The case was filed Wednesday in Duval Circuit Court, but a lawyer representing the players' union, Kenneth Vickers, got the case transferred to federal court Thursday afternoon.

The Rubins were pleased with the ruling that allowed the case to be heard next week.

"The fans get to go toe-to-toe with the players and owners," Mark Rubin said.

Vickers, however, predicted the union would prevail in the hearing next week.

"The main argument is this is a labor union and they don't have a right to say these people cannot strike," Vickers said. "Look forward to Sept. 3 to the Gators (Florida football team) because there is not going to be any baseball."

The Rubins claimed that the Glory Days Sports Pub and William Degar, president of Baseball in Support of our Troops, had a contract through Continental Cablevision to be able to receive televised baseball games.

U.S. aims at Russia players

The Associated Press

TORONTO — The passage of time, the collapse of the Soviet Union and the end of the Cold War have cooled most of the passion that might otherwise accompany a U.S.-Russia basketball game.

Not all of it. Reggie Miller, who probably doesn't know much about the first time the Americans lost to the Soviets in 1972, is thinking about a paycheck for something more recent, last month's Goodwill Games.

"We're really looking forward to playing Russia," said Miller, whose 3-point shooting has started U.S. rallies in the last two games. "That's one game that was marked on our schedules before this began."

"We saw how they pushed around our young boys over there in Russia. We're going to show them a thing or two. Let's see if they do all that pushing now."

The senior citizen of Dream Team II, Dominique Wilkins, was just 11 years old at the time of the controversial 1972 Olympics game in which the Soviet Union won in the final second. That defeat was painful to the U.S. players even today refuse

'Army' taught Shore to be human

Orange County Register

Pauly Shore's ambition is to become a human being. He thinks he's well on his way.

Fans of the comic will witness part of his self-styled evolution from MTV's resident surfer-dude to genuine grown-up human being in the new comedy "In the Army Now," which opens Friday.

Gone is the long-flowing mass of curly hair. Gone is the unique language in which grunge means food and a fresh mug is a good-looking woman. Gone are the colorful scarves and funny walk.

In their place is a new kind of Pauly Shore character. He is slightly older than he was in his last two movies, he has shed his long locks and is responsible enough to hold down a job in an electronics store. Of course, he's still enough of a party animal to lose his job and enough of a flake to join the Army reserves for the money.

We never said it was going to be a quick evolution. "I know where I have to go to be where Tom Hanks is right now," said a serious-sounding Shore, 26, as he sipped on a soft drink on the balcony of his West Hollywood hotel suite.

After playing a high schooler in "Encino Man" and a college-age airhead in "Son-in-Law," Shore has grown up to be a young man on the move in "In the Army Now." He's on the move to Fort Sill, Okla., for basic training.

After his stint in the American desert, he is sent overseas to assist real military men in a North African desert war against the Libyans. Guess who ends up saving the Free World and preserving our way of life?

"If you had asked me three years ago if I thought an army movie would help me segue into being a human being, I'd have said no way," the actor said. "I really didn't want to do it at first but they (Disney) pushed it down my throat."

"I figured it was going to be another 'Stripes' or 'Private Benjamin,' and I didn't want to do that. It's been done before. But as soon as (director) Daniel Petrie Jr. got involved, I knew it was going to be a real movie."

There is further evidence of maturing in Shore besides his change in movie characters and his new haircut. He has moved out of his mother's home (his Shore's attitude toward women is still basically that of a young, irresponsible male. But he is responsible enough to know he shouldn't be in a serious relationship at this time.

Shore's view of relationships, and that of life in general, were picked up through observations made around his mother's famous comedy club. He grew up in the club, and the same comic who now rule the airwaves were his teachers, baby sitters and surrogate fathers. His mother once said, "Comedy has been his whole life, and there really was never another option for him."

He performed stand-up and, in 1990, got his big break when MTV gave him his own show called "Totally Pauly," in which he traveled around the country and essentially goofed on people. He created his own persona—a surfer dude he called Steve—with his own language and fashion statement.

"That persona has been good to him, and Shore hopes the fans of that persona will follow him as he moves away from that character."

Cuban basketball star seeks refugee status in Canada

HAMILTON, Ontario — Richard Matienzo, a 6-foot-6 center who leads the Cuban team in scoring in the World Championship of Basketball, is seeking refugee status in Canada. The Canadian Press reported Thursday. Matienzo left the team after a practice Thursday morning in Toronto, sources told CP, although Cuba's coach said he has not seen the player since Wednesday night. "He has been in contact with an immigration lawyer and right now he's making arrangements with Immigration Canada to turn himself in," Staff Sgt. John Silloco of the Metro Toronto police said. Matienzo, 25, would likely apply for refugee status, Silloco said. A hearing would then be arranged on his application to stay in Canada.

Gorman: Tennis goes high-tech

Former professional tennis player Tom Gorman says today's pros take advantage of the advances in medicine, weight training and nutrition to help boost their games.

By Julie M. McKinnon
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A lot has changed in professional tennis since Tom Gorman started playing tournaments in 1966.

Probably one of the biggest changes, however, has to do with the physical abilities of the players, who now condition regularly. At 6-foot, Gorman was one of the bigger players. "I wish this was available in the mid-60s," said Gorman, waving his hands at the weight machines and other apparatus in the Family Physical Therapy & Sports Injury Clinic. "Now I'd be a midget in that locker room — not necessarily in height, but in stamina and strength."

Gorman was in Twin Falls to speak about mental preparation, strategy and tactics at Sports Medicine Seminar 1994 at the College of Southern Idaho. In conjunction with the seminar, the five-year Davis Cup player and eight-year Davis Cup captain also talked about "The State of Tennis Today" on Thursday night.

The annual seminar is designed to help coaches and educators identify and prevent sports injuries. It is sponsored by the clinic, Twin Falls Clinic & Hospital, CSI and Idaho State University.

Other topics at the seminar, which continues Saturday, include: heat stress, over-use injuries, asthma, allergies, skin disorders, cardiac disorders, medical/legal issues, physically impaired athletes, weight training, taping techniques, foot and ankle injuries, "runner's runs," and the "winning" balance among parents, coaches and athletes.

Professional tennis players now travel with trainers, Gorman said during an interview Thursday, and tournament sites have better facilities for those trainers.

"They're not just guys who give you a rubdown and ice afterwards," Gorman said.

Preventive medicine, rehabilitation, weight training and improved nutrition also now are taken advantage of by professional tennis players, he said.

"Players are much more in touch and aware of all of those opportunities," Gorman said.

Gorman said his "tennis injury" involved his back. When it was injured, muscles would spasm and he would have shooting pains down his leg.

Ex-pro assesses the game today

By Julie M. McKinnon
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If television viewers want more exciting men's tennis play at Wimbledon, then maybe officials should change the density of tennis balls used on grass, says a former tennis professional.

And one thing for certain, Tom Gorman said

Thursday, officials should not mess with the net height, line lengths or other rules of the game.

Men's tennis has been repeatedly criticized for its non-exciting play since Pete Sampras beat Goran Ivanisevic this year for his second straight Wimbledon title. There wasn't a rally longer than six shots during that power match.

"I love watching Pete-Sampras play," said Gor-

The Associated Press

TULSA, Okla. — Here we go again. Another major golf championship. Another gang of non-American golfers jockeying for the top of the leaderboard. At least this PGA Championship isn't over yet.

British Open winner Nick Price of Zimbabwe and Colin Montgomerie of Scotland were tied for the first-round lead Thursday at 3-under-par 67 over the rugged Southern Hills Country Club.

And just a stroke behind were U.S. Open winner Ernie Els of South Africa and 1991 Masters winner Ian Woosnam of Wales.

If the Americans are to salvage the last of this year's four major titles — and avoid a first-ever shutout in the grand slam events — they will have to overcome a fast start by some of the best golfers in the world.

Both were in the group with Els and Woosnam at 68.

"I would like to step up, sure," Mickelson said about America's search for a dominant golfer. "We're all trying. We're all out there working hard, practicing hard. The bottom line is there's better players throughout the world."

Couples, whose run to greatness was set back first by a distracting divorce and then, earlier this year, by a back injury, appears ready to emerge again after winning the Buick Open last week.

"I'm not intimidated by Colin Montgomerie, Ernie Els or Nick Price, just like I'm not intimidated by Tom Watson, Fuzzy Zoeller or Loren Roberts," Couples said.

"We've got more foreigners playing in our tournaments now and they've showed they are capable of winning," he said. A record 36 foreign players are in the 151-player PGA field.

Knotted in a group at 69, two strokes back, were Watson, Roberts, Zoeller, Sam Torrance of Scotland, D.A. Weir, David Gilford of England, Raymond Floyd, Bruce Fleisher and Lanny Wadkins. Watson has contended in all three majors this year only to shoot final-round 74s in each.

If Price should win this PGA Championship he would become the first golfer to win consecutive major championships since Watson won the U.S. and British Opens in 1982.

"I'm riding the crest of the wave and I'm having as much fun as I ever have and long may it last," Price said about the hot streak that has earned him three PGA Tour wins this year plus the British Open. "It's a great leaderboard," he said. "It's got great foreign players and great American players. It should be a great finish on Sunday."

Montgomerie, who lost the U.S. Open to Els when he shot a miserable 78 in a playoff at Oakland in June, got out early and posted his 67 before Price and Els teed off. It held up until both Price and Els, playing together, birdied the 17th hole to go to three under-par. But Els bogeyed No. 18 to fall a stroke behind. Couples birdied No. 18 to go to two under-par.

Montgomerie drove the ball beautifully, hitting the thick, wiry Bermuda grass rough only once in a near-perfect round marred only by a couple of short birdie misses that could have made the score even lower.

He rolled in a 30-foot birdie putt on the first hole, then made nine consecutive pars, only one of which was at all testy, requiring a 5-foot saving putt on No. 8.

His par streak ended on No. 11 when he nearly made a 162-yard, 8-iron for a hole-in-one.

"It pitched dead on line in the hole," he said. "The pitch mark was half in the hole, and I had to have a PGA official repair the cup before I could putt."

The ball clipped the cup on a fly, bounced off the pin and ended up 8 feet from the hole. Montgomerie made it to go 2-under and then birdied the par-5 13th to get to 3-under.

Paul Azinger, the defending PGA champion who is playing in just his second tournament in nine months after receiving treatments for cancer in his right shoulder, shot a 40 on the front nine and finished with 75, eight strokes behind Montgomerie.

Judge rejects bar's plea to halt strike

The Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — A federal judge refused Thursday to stop the Major League Baseball Players' Association from striking, but set a hearing for next week on whether to halt the walkout.

U.S. District Judge Harvey Schlesinger denied a temporary restraining order sought by a sports bar and the president of a fans group to block the strike scheduled to begin after the games played on Thursday.

Schlesinger scheduled a hearing Aug. 19 on a request for a preliminary injunction seeking to order the "owners and players to conduct and play the remaining regular and postseason games, as scheduled."

Ellis Rubin, a Miami lawyer who filed the suit with his son, Mark, said, "In the immortal words of Yogi Berra, 'It ain't over until it's over.'"

Mark-Rubin said the decision to hear the case shows that it wasn't a frivolous lawsuit, as some claimed.

The case was filed Wednesday in Duval Circuit Court, but a lawyer representing the players' union, Kenneth Vickers, got the case transferred to federal court Thursday afternoon.

"The Rubins were pleased with the ruling that allowed the case to be heard next week."

"The fans get to go toe-to-toe with the players and owners," Mark Rubin said.

Vickers, however, predicted the union would prevail in the hearing next week.

"The main argument is this is a labor union and people don't have a right to say these people cannot strike," Vickers said.

"Look forward to Sept. 3 to the Gators (Florida football team) because there is not going to be any baseball."

The Rubins claimed that the Glory Days Sports Pub and William Degar, president of People In Support of our Teams, had a contract through Continental Cablevision to be able to receive televised baseball games.

U.S. aims at Russia players

The Associated Press

TORONTO — The passage of time, the collapse of the Soviet Union and the end of the Cold War have cooled most of the passion that might otherwise accompany a U.S.-Russia basketball game.

Not all of it. Reggie Miller, who probably does not know much about the first time the Americans lost to the Soviets in 1972, is thinking about a paycheck for something more recent, last month's Goodwill Games.

"We're really looking forward to playing Russia," said Miller, whose 3-point shooting has started U.S. rallies in the last two games. "That's one game that was marked on our schedules before this began."

"We saw how they pushed around our young boys over there in Russia. We're sending in their big brothers. Let's see if they do all that pushing now."

The senior citizen of Dream Team II, Dominique Wilkins, was just 11 years old at the time of the controversial 1972 Olympics game in which the Soviet Union won in the final. That defeat was so painful the U.S. players even today refuse

Montana to start against 'Skins'

The Associated Press

Joe Montana will play extensively for the first time when the Kansas City Chiefs go to Washington on Friday for an exhibition game with the Redskins.

NFL camps

Coach Marty Schottenheimer said that Montana, who did not play in the first exhibition game and played just two series against Minnesota in Tokyo on Saturday, will play most of the first half against Washington.

"We'll open with Joe," Schottenheimer said. "Then we will go to Steve Bono. Joe will play most of the first half, and then we will give Steve an opportunity."

Matt Blundin, competing with Bono for the backup job behind Montana, has taken most of the snaps in the Chiefs' first two exhibition games.

In another development, the Chiefs signed free agent wide receiver Wesley Carroll, who spent last season with Cincinnati.

Chiefs' Chargers
The San Diego Chargers have lightning bolts on their helmets. But they rarely see the real thing in California.

They did on Thursday, when a thunderstorm in Berlin disrupted their practice with the New York Giants, their opponent on Saturday. Among other things, it caused general manager Bobby Brown to take off his new running shoes and go barefoot.

But both teams got their work in.

Eagles look at Sanders

WEST CHESTER, Pa. (AP)

The Philadelphia Eagles have contacted the agent for free-agent cornerback-kick returner Dion Sanders, according to a published report.

Sanders, a two-sport star who is expected to have his baseball season cut short by a players' strike beginning at midnight Thursday, talked with Eagles owner Jeffrey Lurie, unidentified sources told the Philadelphia Daily News.

The sources said that Lurie and team vice president John Banner flew to Cincinnati last week to meet with the Reds' center fielder, who had played football with the Atlanta Falcons.

Lurie, who purchased the Eagles for $185 million, would like to pair Sanders with Eric Allen, a five-time All-Pro cornerback, in the Eagles' secondary.

The Eagles owner, according to Associated Press sources, flew directly from Chicago, where the Eagles played last Friday, to Cincinnati.

He will be lost from 6-8 weeks after breaking his left ankle in a non-contact drill Wednesday.

"He just caught a pass and gave away a lot of yards," coach John J. Sanders said.

Lyons, who started eight games last year and caught eight passes, was thought to have sprained the ankle but

Packers

Coach Mike Holmgren continues to worry about his team's struggling running game.

Free agent running back Reggie Cobb gained just 15 yards on seven carries in an exhibition with the Los Angeles Rams on Saturday and rookie LeShon Johnson, the nation's leading rusher last year, sat out with a pulled hamstring.

Holmgren describes the new-look running game as "an ongoing project" and adds: "I wasn't satisfied with anybody."

Rams

Safety Deral Boykin did not practice Thursday, a day after needing six stitches to close a cut in his head caused by a fight during the Los Angeles Rams' practice.

Boykin was hit by a helmet swung by offensive tackle Darryl Ashmore on Wednesday.

"He'll be OK," coach Chuck Knox said. "We just didn't want him to have to wear a helmet today (due to the stitches)."

Other players involved in the fight were defensive end Robert Young, rookie tackle Ron Edwards, cornerback Steve Israel and Ben Bryant. Knox would not say if or how much any of the combatants were fined, but all practiced.

Colts

The Indianapolis Colts signed running back Rodney Culver on Thursday, leaving two holdouts missing from training camp.

Culver, a short-yardage specialist whose five touchdowns led the team in 1993, arrived at Colts training camp early Thursday evening. Contract terms were not disclosed.

Gwynn gives up record hunt for solidarity among players

HOUSTON (AP) — Tony

Gwynn temporarily packed away his dreams of hitting .400 on Thursday — and he did so gladly.

Flirting with a .400 batting average much of the season, Gwynn missed his chance to surpass the magic figure before Friday's strike deadline. But he'd rather have a deal with the owners.

"People look at this as individuals not having a chance to break records," Gwynn said. "But guys have sacrificed careers to make things better for a lot of young baseball players."

"Never in my wildest dreams did I think I'd get this close to .400. But as far as I'm concerned, getting an agreement is more important than hitting .400."

Gwynn needed to go 6-for-6 in Thursday's 8-6 victory over Houston to reach the .400 mark before Friday's scheduled strike.

Instead, he went 3-for-5 and raised his average from .391 to .394.

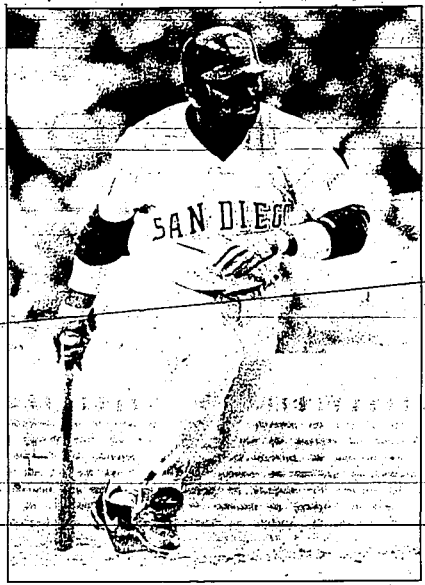

"We hope it's not a long strike," Gwynn said. "I'm happy with my season. I hope I'm not done and I hope I get a chance to pick up those extra six points. If not, I've done everything I wanted to do this year."

Gwynn, the major-league leading hitter, has been hitting near .400 for more than a year. Since July 1, 1993, Gwynn has hit .399 (.258 for .646) in 166 games.

"I've never given him any advice," said Padres manager Jim Riggleman. "I just sit back and watch him. He thinks like a manager plus being the best hitter in baseball."

Riggleman compares Gwynn to the best hitters in baseball, including Ted Williams, who hit .406 in 1941, the last player to reach that milestone.

"When those guys hit .400 I don't think they had 500 at-bats and they didn't have a lot of walks," Riggleman said. "He's been in that area and nobody else has been that close."

San Diego's Tony Gwynn was battering in the .390s before today's strike was called.

Gwynn doesn't think missing part of the season would detract from .400 if he gets another chance. "It won't for me but it would for everybody else," Gwynn said. "It's tough enough to hit .400 for a month. It would be quite an accomplishment to do it four months."

Competitors run, walk at 'Rock'

CASTLEFORD — The first annual "Running the Rock" fun run and walk was held July 30 at Balanced Rock.

Competitors came from Utah and Nevada, as well as from around the Magic Valley, and ranged in age anywhere from two-month-olds up.

A 5K walk and run, along with a 10K race was offered. The 10K followed through Salmon Falls Creek Canyon at Balanced Rock.

The top three placers in each division are as follows:

10K Men — 1. Tom Poulson, 37:10; 2. David Chabon, 41:53; 3. Martin Garfield, 44:00.
5K Men — 1. Scott Scholtes, 19:42; 2. Tony Lakone, 20:41; 3. Ryan Eick, 21:37.
5K Run Women — 1. Anna McElroy, 24:37; 2. Dawn Harvey, 27:34; 3. Lena Padilla, 29:01.
5K Walk Men — 1. Darius Ulrich, 44:35; 2. Nathan Bullock, 47:31; 3. Paul Padilla, 47:31.
5K Walk Women — 1. Mary Ritz, 34:02; 2. Maria DeGroot, 40:20; 3. Rachel Bullock, 42:20.

REXBURG — The Twin Falls 11-12-year-old All-Star Baseball team finished as champions in the Rexburg Tournament July 29-31.

The tournament record was 5-1 with their only loss being to the Rupert Rangers 7-3 in the first game of the tournament.

The Nationals fought back with victories against the Burley White Sox, 10-5 and the Boise Pirates, 7-1. Ben Thompson added to the effort against the Pirates with a home run hit.

Jonathan Brumbach's excellent pitching held the Madison Cats scoreless in the last three innings and nearly flawless fielding clinched the win at 5-4 for the Nationals in their fourth game.

The Nationals met the Rupert Rangers in the championship game. Zach Gregersen pitched the entire game, holding the Rangers to only three hits.

Excellent batting by Kelsey McAlliams with a triple and a home run ran up the score and great effort in the field brought the Nationals' first place, winning 7-0.

Leading batter for the tourney was Kelsey McAlliams with five triples and a home run. Leading pitchers were Zach Gregersen and Jonathan Brumbach.

The Nationals were 23-8 for the season. The team batting average was .353, with Robbie Buck at the top with .543. Zach Gregersen pitched a 3.58 ERA with 62 strike outs in 55 innings.

WAC looks beyond Holiday Bowl

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) —

Western Athletic Conference commissioner Karl Benson confirms the league has been contacted by Cotton Bowl officials about abandoning the Holiday Bowl.

But he also says the WAC is "exploring daily" future post-season possibilities other than the December game in Salt Lake City where the league has played since 1978.

"We're looking beyond the Holiday Bowl at all opportunities," Benson told the Salt Lake Tribune on Wednesday from league headquarters in Littleton, Colo.

Benson said it has been suggested that the WAC champion play in the 1997 edition of the Texas Bowl game, probably against the Big 12 Conference runner-up.

"I've been contacted by (Cotton Bowl general manager) Rick Barker," he said. "But he's also in contact with some other conferences."

On Wednesday, the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association decided to seek linkage with the Big 12 as a replacement for the Southwest Conference champion.

Last week, NCAA Division I-A commissioners chose the Fiesta, Orange and Sugar bowls as the Tier I Bowl Alliance for the 1995-97 seasons, leaving the Cotton Bowl without a chance to help decide the national championship.

Bowl officials vowed to come up with the best game possible, possibly one that would involve the Big 12 Conference runner-up. They decided Wednesday to seek the link with the soon-to-be-expanded conference.

When the SWC splits in 1996, Baylor, Texas Tech, Texas and Texas A&M will be bound for the Big 12. Rice, Texas Christian and Southern Methodist will move to the WAC. Houston has indicated it will play as an independent.

Lawmakers rip into Olympic officials over Harding in look at amateur sports hours, 35 minutes, but a Senate committee finally asked the biggest Olympic question Thursday: Why didn't you get rid of Tonya?

"It was a blot on our history of participation in the Olympics," Sen. Ted Stevens told Harvey Schiller, the executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee. "But I guess it was unavoidable."

Coming late on a sultry day in Capitol Hill, Stevens' statement was perhaps the most exciting moment in an afternoon of hearings on possible revisions of the Amateur Sports Act of 1978, the federal law that governs Olympic sports in the United States.

The Senate Commerce Committee heard from a dozen witnesses that the 16-year-old law is basically OK. Since the passage of the Amateur Sports Act, the United States has become the preeminent Olympic nation in the world," said Anita DeFrantz, a former Olympic rower and now a member of the International Olympic Committee.

But witnesses also said that the Olympic community in the United States still contains too few women and minority group members, does not protect itself well and has done nothing to improve the deteriorating physical condition of the nation's children while churning out a few high-priced superstars.

"It disturbs me how our system pays a professional athlete $50 million but ignores the health needs of children in our inner cities and the rest of our nation," said Tom McMillen, a former pro basketball star and congressman who is co-chairman of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

The law, which Stevens wrote, helped to open the door to competing jurisdictions in U.S. amateur sports and gave the USOC sweeping powers to put together teams for the Olympics and other international sports events.

When the law was enacted, however, there had never been anyone close to the soap opera of Tonya and Nancy.

Tonya Harding, of course, was allowed to compete in the Winter Games in Lillehammer, Norway, last February, despite USOC efforts to kick her off the Olympic team amid growing evidence of her involvement in the attack on figure skating rival Nancy Kerrigan.

Schiller said the USOC did all it could — or felt comfortably able to do — under its own bylaws and the law the committee was discussing.

Since the attack occurred during the National Figure Skating Championships, Schiller said, the USOC did not have direct control over Harding, even though those championships picked the Olympic figure skating team.

A blue-ribbon panel is reviewing the situation and is expected to recommend a code of conduct for all potential U.S. Olympians, Schiller said.

Goodwill Games official vows return

NEW YORK (AP) — The Goodwill Games lost nearly $40 million, yet event president Jack Kelly said Thursday that hasn't diminished thoughts of expanding the competition to include winter games.

"We're not going to try to pull our wings in and get conservative," Kelly said in a conference call from St. Petersburg, Russia.

The games that ended Sunday in St. Petersburg was $13 million in the red before the opening day. Television ratings less than one half of what was guaranteed to U.S. advertisers was a major reason another $26 million was added to the loss, Kelly said.

The latest deficits mean about $100 million in losses for the quadrennial Olympic-style event since it was first staged in 1986.

Still, Kelly says Ted Turner, head of Turner Broadcasting which owns CNN and several other cable TV channels and is the founder of the Games, is not deterred. "He's looking at the concept of a winter games," Kelly said. "It

— Jack Kelly, on the Games' low TV ratings shows the type of thinking he has."

Kelly said he wasn't sure of reasons for the low television ratings in the United States, which he said were "in the 1.3-1.4 range" going into the final weekend.

TBS, the flagship station of Turner's communications empire that carried the Goodwill Games, promised advertisers a 3.1 rating. A ratings point in the United States is a percentage of homes watching a particular program, or about 942,000 homes.

"It goes way beyond what we were expecting,"

Kelly said. "We weren't projecting under delivery of that magnitude."

Kelly said reasons for the ratings debacle won't be known until an analysis is completed.

"Maybe it was the glitches, maybe it was the perception of empty seats," Kelly said.

Empty seats seemed to be numerous throughout the games, but Kelly said that was a misperception since attendance was about 450,000 out of a capacity of somewhat less than 700,000.

"Crowds at many of the venues were full: volleyball, judo, taekwondo," Kelly said.

He admitted that at two of the premier events, track and basketball, there were large sections of empty seats and most were "directly in line of the TV camera."

The 1998 event in New York City should be much easier, Kelly said. "In New York, the facilities already are in place, or the funding is already to go," he said. "Then we can focus on issues related to games without having to worry about infrastructure issues."

Thinclads show off tonight

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — An opportunity to better track and field interest in the United States and provide a stage for the African nations to showcase talent are the prime reasons for the Pan-Africa-USA meet beginning tonight.

"We have seen the emergence of African athletes over the last 10 years," team coach Rotimi Obajimi of Nigeria said Thursday.

"This gives us a chance to show off some of our better athletes and is an opportunity for some of our lesser-known athletes to compete. They don't get that chance very often."

"For the African athlete, it's a window of opportunity to be seen in the United States."

For the United States, which often is criticized as being interested in track and field only during Olympic years, it's a rare opportunity to hold a respected international competition other than the Games.

"It's a dream some of us have had for a long time," Ollan Cassell, executive director of USA Track & Field, said. "We've seen it fulfilled four times already."

"We think this will kick off an era of good track and field competition in the United States."

This will be the fifth dual meet between the United States and Africa, the first since 1982, when it was held in Dubai, shortly after the site of this weekend's two-day competition.

The U.S. men's teams are 4-0 against Africa, dating back to 1971, when the meet was first held, and the American women are 3-0.

The African team, featuring strong sprint and distance runners, plus a fine array of jumpers, is confident of winning for the first time. An indication of its strength was evident at the 1992 World Cup at Havana, Cuba, where the African men surprised by winning the team title.

"This is just as strong a team," Obajimi said.

U.S. men's coach Ken Shannon of the University of Washington agreed.

"Africa has a great amount of talent," he said. "The Africans need this type of meet to bring it out."

The African team will include eight members from South Africa, a country that had been barred from international competition because of its racial policies, before being reinstated by the International Amateur Athletic Federation prior to the 1992 Olympics.

"It was a victory for Africa now that it is a united continent," said Sam Nelson of Ghana, vice president of the African Amateur Athletic Confederation. "No longer is there apartheid."

Mathis' son carries weight in boxing ring

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Buster Mathis worried about his son's welfare and doubted the fat 14-year-old boy's resolve when the youngster said he wanted to box.

Now he's a proud father and the demanding trainer of 24-year-old Buster Mathis Jr., who will fight former-heavyweight champion Riddick Bowe on Saturday night at the Convention Center. "He weighed 325 pounds," Buster Sr. recalled in a telephone interview from his home at Grand Rapids, Mich. "He had the Buster Mathis disease — a weight problem."

Excessive weight didn't keep the father from being a successful amateur and a pro heavyweight contender. He often fought in the neighborhood of 300 pounds.

Obesity, however, almost killed him. "Two years ago, I wouldn't have given two cents for my life," the 51-year-old Mathis said. "My weight went to 500 pounds. I had a stroke, kidney disease, my heart stopped and I had two toes off."

Now I'm doing great. Three times a week he undergoes kidney dialysis and a recent problem with that prevented him from being at Saturday night's fight. In fact, even though he is the trainer, he's gone to only one of his son's pro fights, and that was early in his unbeaten 14-fight career.

For a long time Buster Jr. didn't know about his father's boxing career, that he fought Joe Frazier and Muhammad Ali as a pro, that he beat out Frazier for a spot on the 1964 Olympic team, but that he didn't go to Tokyo because of a broken right hand. Frazier won a gold medal.

"We never talked about boxing," Buster Sr. said. "Then the other kids told him they heard I was a good fighter. He asked me if I was a good boxer and I told him, 'Pretty good.'"

Then at 14, Junior told dad, "I want to be a boxer."

"School is a hard place for a fat kid," the younger Mathis said Thursday. "You got picked on all the time. I tried basketball, baseball and football and I wasn't good at any of them. I tried to ask girls out, and they laughed at me."

"I took him to the gym," Buster Sr. remembered. "He couldn't run. He could hardly jump rope, but he told me, 'Dad, I'm not going to quit.'"

Junior hung tough and became a decent amateur before turning pro in 1991. "I couldn't believe this was my son who couldn't do anything in his life because of his weight," Buster Sr. said. "I'm very elated about him. He believes in himself. I'm very proud of him."

Junior, who is 6-foot, began boxing weighing 287 pounds. He now fights at about 225. The 6-5 Bowe fights in the 240s and has been around 300 pounds when not in training. "Bowe still has the Buster Mathis disease," Buster Sr. said.

While proud of his son, Buster Sr. has reservations about the tough profession he chose. "I'm a father before anything else. I'm nervous with him fighting. It was something I didn't want him to do in the first place. It was something he chose to do. I tried to make him quit. I knew it was tough. Now I'm behind him 100 percent."

Junior is much like his father in his friendly, easy-going matter, but when it comes to boxing it's not a case of like father, like son.

Despite his size, 6-3 Buster Sr. was a good boxer, exceptionally quick on his feet. He had 21 knockouts on his 30-4 record, but he was not a power puncher and he lacked stamina. His shortcomings hurt him against fighters such as Frazier, who stopped him in the 11th round, and Ali, who scored one-sided decision over him in 1971.

Seattle linebacker Bob Spillituli, making a comeback from a ruptured tendon in his knee, works at the Seahawks' training camp earlier this summer.

Seahawks play exhibition opener at Husky Stadium

SEATTLE (AP) — After an 18-year absence, the NFL is returning to the University of Washington's Husky Stadium this week.

And because of the Kingdom's questionable status, the Seattle Seahawks aren't sure how long they're going to have to play their home games away from their home.

Both of Seattle's NFL exhibition games have been moved from the Kingdom to Husky Stadium.

The latest NFL exhibition game on Husky Stadium's artificial turf will match two teams who are looking to improve this season. Tampa Bay finished 5-11 in 1993 and 1992 under coach Sam Wyche, who was fired after coaching eight seasons in Cincinnati.

The Seahawks were 6-10 last season after a franchise-worst 2-14 record in 1992 under coach Tom Flores.

In their exhibition opener last weekend, the Seahawks were 13-9 losers at Indianapolis last Friday night and the Blues were 17-16 winners over Cincinnati in Tampa, Fla., last Saturday night.

A Husky Stadium "crowd" of between 45,000 and 50,000 is expected when the Seahawks (0-1) and the Tampa Bay Buccaneers (1-0) play Saturday at 2 p.m. EDT. Seize the day! play the Minnesota Vikings at Husky Stadium the following Saturday, Aug. 20.

The Seahawks are planning on playing their home regular-season opener Sunday, Sept. 18, in the Kingdom, but King County officials haven't given them any guarantees that the building will be open by then.

It's no slam dunk.

The Kingdom has been closed to the American League Seattle Mariners, the American Professional Soccer League Seattle Sounders and the Seahawks since July 19.

Four 26-pound acoustical ceiling tiles fell about 30 minutes before a crowd was allowed into the Kingdom for a Mariners-Baltimore game on that date. "As a result of the threat of more falling ceiling tiles, engineers recommended the removal of the Kingdom's entire 40,000 ceiling tiles."

The Kingdom's ceiling has been stripped of those tiles but the building's status is still on hold while the ceiling work continues. Scraping the Kingdom's ceiling cleared uncovered cavities in the concrete.

An engineering and architectural company was hired to spray a cement mortar over much of the Kingdom's ceiling.

The Seahawks have to know soon about whether the Kingdom is going to be ready for their Sunday, Sept. 18, regular-season opener against the San Diego Chargers.

Fox kicks off coverage tonight

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — John Madden wore a Three Stooges T-shirt, but at least it was clean.

Terry Bradshaw's wasn't. His luggage was missing somewhere between Dallas and here, en route via overnight courier — hopefully.

Pat Summerall walked into the room in a white terry cloth robe, and Bradshaw asked him for a hair cut. "Just a little off the sides," Bradshaw said. He has nothing on the top.

All the while, Jerry Glanville sat at a corner table in the hotel courtesy suite, trying to get somebody to tell him his schedule for the rest of the day.

"I'd like to go to a 49ers practice," said Glanville, another coach turned broadcaster. "But I don't know if they'll let me."

Must be the NFL on Fox.

Tonight, the Fox network will televise its first NFL game, Denver at San Francisco. To the teams, it's a rather meaningless exhibition game. To Fox, it's a milestone, marking it as a legitimate fourth network, capable of competing with the Big Three.

Madden and Summerall will be in the radio booth, with Bob Streeter producing and Sandy Grossman directing, as they did for 13 years at CBS. Bradshaw, another CBS defector, will be the star of the half-time show.

Glanville, with the Atlanta Falcons, will be doing the first of his two practice games with play-by-play partner Kevin Harlan before they are turned loose on the viewing public.

A great deal of the football world will be watching the first game broadcast by Fox, its $1.58 billion, four-year deal with the NFL. Late last year, Fox took the NFC portion of the NFL TV contract from CBS, the original network of the NFL.

"People ask me how it will be different," Madden said. "The only way it will be different is that Pat and I will be together all year."

At CBS, Summerall never joined Madden until the regular season. Before that, he was at the PGA golf championship, then the U.S. Open tennis tournament.

"I just want to cover the games," Madden said. "The games are all different. The way they play the games changes. ... The great thing about this is, like, yesterday, I went to the 49ers practice in the morning, then I had lunch at the training table. You can't beat that. All you can eat. Then we watched something and had dinner with the ballplayers."

New NBA team decides on logo

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — The newest NBA expansion team will be known as the Vancouver Grizzlies and their logo will feature a crouched snarling bear with an outstretched front paw clutching a red basketball.

The name and the team colors — turquoise, bronze and black — were announced Thursday in a Haida longhouse surrounded by totem poles at the Museum of Anthropology at the University of British Columbia.

The name Grizzlies surfaced after information was leaked last week hinting that the team would be called the Ravens, a bird also closely linked to West Coast native culture. Vancouver had originally chosen Mounties as the team's nickname. But problems with trademark registration made the name unworkable.

ANSWER: Two hearts. The rebid of a five-card major is usually unnecessary. In this case, South has little choice. The lack of a spade honor demotes a rebid of two no-trump and South shouldn't raise clubs with only two.

Garner dusts off Rockford for movies

Port Lauderdale
Sun-Sentinel

LOS ANGELES — James Garner is one of those people who never changes, for which his fans are surely grateful.

Garner, 66, has agreed to reprise his Emmy-winning character Jim Rockford in a series of six "Rockford Files" TV movies during the next two seasons on CBS. Asked why he was revisiting his role, Garner quipped in characteristically glib fashion, "Money."

Once he got the anticipated laugh from TV writers, Garner made it clear that there wouldn't be enough cash to get him back into a character he didn't enjoy playing.

The real reason for his return is "Rockford Files," for which he won an Emmy in 1977, is his affection for Jim Rockford.

"I love the character. He's a wonderful anti-hero. He always appealed to me because he's not your average, run-of-the-mill hero."

Garner figured it was now or never. "I'm in an age that I don't know if I could do this three or four years down the line, and I wanted to do it."

One of the traits that endears Jim Rockford to Jim Garner was the private eye's preference for using his wits instead of violence.

"I don't want to be a mean-spirited hero," Garner said. "I have problems with some of the heroes today who must kill all these people. I don't know what it is about producers and writers who have to kill 30 people in the first reel."

"Rockford" fans will be pleased that Garner also was able to reassemble his supporting cast. Stuart Margolin will be back as the incorrigible Angel Martin, and Joe Santos is returning as Detective Dennis Becker. Viewers will be brought up-to-date on what has happened to them during the intervening years in the first movie, which is targeted to air around Thanksgiving.

Chefs Child, Pepin share cooking skills

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Gastronomes will consider it a summit meeting as Julia Child and Jacques Pepin combine their kitchen skills for a sumptuous meal on public television.

Just what you've always wanted to know: how to bone a turkey, fillet salmon, whip up an osso bucco and top it all-off with an apple charlotte with two sauces.

"Julia Child & Jacques Pepin: Cooking in Concert" can be seen on PBS stations at different times during the August pledge drive.

Both chefs have earned reputations with cooking series on television and bestselling cookbooks. Pepin is a native of France who came to New York in 1959 to work at the famed Le Pavillon. Now he travels 30 weeks a year to demonstrate his cooking techniques, and he teaches at Boston University, where the TV special was taped.

Child's no-nonsense cookery has been enjoyed by millions since her TV debut with "The French Chef" in 1963. She is a Pasadena native who graduated from Smith College in 1934 and joined the OSS after World War II broke out. Her first assignment was Caylon, where she met another OSS agent, Paul Child. They were married in 1948.

While her husband was stationed with the USIA in Paris in 1952, Mrs. Child enrolled in the cooking school Cordon Bleu. She also took private lessons with famed chefs and with two other women opened a cooking school in Paris. After Child's other postings in Europe, they settled in Cambridge, Mass. She was interviewed there by telephone.

"It was fun working with Jacques," she commented. "He's a marvelous professional. It was a very good illustration of the professional versus the home cook, which is what I am."

"They (the producers) didn't put a lot of the things in. We assaulted the Cuisinart. There was a stove with a glass top, and you never could tell whether it was on or not. We spent a lot of time cursing out the stove."

Watchers of cooking shows wonder how dishes get cooked within a half-hour broadcast. That was no problem on the Child-Pepin special. "The show lasted about two hours," Child explained. "I think we got everything cooked in time."

The two chefs have been friends since the 1950s, when he was studying for a master's degree in French literature at Columbia University and beginning to make a name for himself in the cooking world. Both helped found the American Institute of Wine and Food.

Q. During many episodes of "Wings," Helen (Crystal Bernard) has been shown playing the cello. It looks as if she is actually playing. Does Bernard have personal experience with the cello? If so, did she ever aspire to be a professional musician? — K.M.K., San Jose, Calif.

A. The daughter of an evangelical Baptist minister, Bernard traveled and sang with her family from a very young age. Accomplished on the keyboard, she started taking cello lessons for her role as Helen Chappel on her cello-playing scenes on "Wings" would look real.

Q. How long has "Murder, She Wrote" been on?

A. S.D., Dallas, Texas.

Q. The show begins its 11th season next month. Angela Lansbury, so far winless, has received her 10th Emmy nomination for her role as Jessica Fletcher.

Q. I recently saw Frank Langella on the HBO movie "Doomsday Gun." I have been a fan of his for a long time. Can you give me any information on him, including marital status? — B.L.B., Buffalo, N.Y.

A. Langella, 54, was born in Bayonne, N.J., attended Syracuse University and apprenticed at the Pocono Playhouse. His first years on the New York stage were great successes — he won Obie awards for three consecutive years and a Tony in 1975 for his Broadway debut in Edward Albee's "Seascape." The actor's movie career was coming along fine in the 1970s as well. He made his film debut in Mel Brooks' "The Twelve Chairs" and followed that with "Diary of Mad Housewife." His 1977 Broadway portrayal of "Dracula" was followed by a movie version in 1979. More recently, Langella has been in "Dave" and last month's HBO movie "Doomsday Gun." He'll appear in the upcoming "Toot Shed," with Ellen Barkin and Laurence Fishburne, and "Junior" with Arnold Schwarzenegger. Langella has been married since 1977 to the former Ruth Weil. The couple lives in Manhattan.

Q. I was an avid fan of "The Doctors." Now I am involved with "Matlock." Ever since seeing the cast of characters in "Matlock," I have been trying to find out if Brynna Thayer or Nancy Stafford played the part of Greta Powers in "The Doctors." I read in "Parade" magazine that Alec Baldwin starred in "The Doctors" in 1980. Did he play the part of Billy Aldrich?

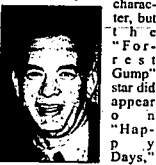

G.F., Crescent City, Calif.

A. Nancy Stafford was Adrienne Hunt on "The Doctors" in 1982. Greta Powers was played by the actresses Lori-Nan Engler (1981-82), Gracie Harrison (1980-81), Jennifer Reilly (1980), Jennifer Houlton (1971-80), Arlene Munker (1971) and Eileen Kearney (1971). Baldwin did play Billy Aldrich (1980-82). Brynna Thayer was on "One Life to Live" as Jenny Wolok.

Q. I would like to know if Tom Hanks was in "Happy Days." — R.J., Las Vegas, Nev.

A. He wasn't a regular character, but he met future "Splash" director, Ron Howard.

During a recent "Late Show" appearance, David Letterman surprised Hanks with vintage clips from some of his 1970s TV work, including "Happy Days," "Family Tie" and "Love Boat" guest shots.

Hanks and director Howard team up again this month when they begin filming the movie "Apollo 13." Q. My friend thinks I am nuts. Wasn't there a TV spinoff for the movie "Barefoot in the Park"? I remember it being on in the '70s with an all-black cast. Can you also tell us who the actors were? — L.Z., Orlando, Fla.

A. You're remembering a mostly forgettable 1970 ABC sitcom based on Neil Simon's play and movie. Comic-actor-producer Scoey Mitchell and Tracy Reed were the leads. The show lasted 13 weeks.

Q. I wonder if you know where I can next see Sam Waterston. I enjoy him so much in "I'll Fly Away" reruns. — B.W., Fort Worth, Texas.

A. Waterston will give series TV another try this fall when he joins the cast of NBC's "Law & Order."

Q. I am a big fan of Mavis McDonnell of "Dances With Wolves" and "Blue Chips." Did she ever star in a sitcom that took place in a hospital emergency room? I believe it ran in the early '80s and also starred Elliott Gould. — P.K., Buffalo, N.Y.

A. McDonnell played Gould's hospital supervisor in the 1984-85 sitcom "E.R.," not to be confused with this fall's new hospital drama "E.R." The new show, from "Jurassic Park" author Michael Crichton, stars Anthony Edwards ("Top Gun," "Northern Exposure"), George Clooney ("Sisters") and Sherry Stringfield ("NYPD Blue").

McDonnell

Q. We recently saw a quick item on the news that told of Ray Combs of "Family Feud" being in an automobile accident and being partially paralyzed. We've heard no follow-up and we'd like to know how he is doing. We watch "Family Feud" every day and we think the show and Ray Combs are great. — R. & P.G., Landenberg, Pa.

A. Combs, 38, was seriously injured on July 11 when he was sideswiped by another driver on Los Angeles' Ventura freeway. His doctors and agent say Combs is recovering from temporary paralysis and is expected to make a full recovery. His condition has been upgraded from serious to fair and he will begin physical therapy at a Burbank hospital. On July 28th, the game-show host made a quick "Tonight" show appearance from his hospital bed, where he helped Jay Leno lead the audience in a mock version of "Family Feud."

Barr's character rooted in reality

Julia Barr has been coming into our living rooms every afternoon for the past 18 years (with an 18-month break during the early '80s) as Brooke English in the popular ABC daytime drama "All My Children." She started her run on the soap as a somewhat spoiled teenager sent to live with her Aunt Phoebe and has since grown into the responsible editor of a magazine.

Soap studs
John N. Goudas

Along the way, she has had the usual traumatic things happen to her that happen to most prominent stars on a soap. However, as Barr notes, "I have always felt that Brooke was rooted in more reality than many other soap characters. The writers have always done well by Brooke and never threw her so much of a plot curve that it seemed outrageous."

Also during her almost two decades, Barr has earned six Daytime Emmy nominations and took the coveted trophy home in 1991 when she won as Outstanding Supporting Actress. Barr is one of those actresses who always invests her character with a validity that makes the viewer comfortable. Whatever may be happening plot-wise, Barr plays Brooke with honesty and it comes across strongly.

"Brooke has always been a fighter against the bad guys, whoever they may be. She is definitely romantic, but she sees beyond romance and is fairly practical in all her decisions," Barr said in describing her character. "Brooke, historically, grew up in a wealthy family, but there wasn't a lot of attention paid to her. She didn't know unconditional love until she went to live with her gregarious Aunt Phoebe. I think she wants to see the world become a better place. And since her storyline includes losing a daughter in an accident involving a drunk driver, she has a deep emotional underpinning. I think Brooke is well-grounded, considering all that she has gone through."

In her private life, Julia is also well-grounded, thanks to a hasty 13-year marriage to oral surgeon Richard Hirschlag and their 10-year-old daughter Allison Jane.

"The choice has always been clear to me."

"Family is very important. On 'All My Children' has given me a place to do what I love — act — and it has made it possible to have a life, too. After my daughter was born, I made a conscious decision to stay on the soap and be around for her and my husband. It has worked out beautifully so far."

Q. Please give me some information on actor Mark Hamill-Luke Skywalker in "Star Wars." Is he the voice behind the Joker in "Batman: The Animated Series?"
A. Reader, Winston-Salem, N.C. Hamill provides the voice of the villainous Joker on Warner Bros. "Batman," seen weekdays on Fox's Children's Network lineup. The actor, number 13 on Sept. 25's "Q," was also heard to "Save By the Bell: The College Years." Has it been canceled? — K.M., Placerville, Calif.

A. The weekly series won't be back, but look for Kelly and Zack (Tiffany-Amber Thiesen and Mark-Paul Gossett) to tie the knot on an NBC-TV movie this fall.

Q. I am a fan of "In the Heat of the Night." I heard that the show was going to be taken off the air. I hope this is not true. — A.Q., Bradenton, Fla.

A. Look for "Heat" in the occasional two-hour movie format beginning this fall. George C. Scott guest stars in the first offering.

Q. What was Underdog's real name? We're going bonkers trying to remember. — D.S., Alto, N.J.

A. Shoeshine Boy was the alter ego of the canine crime-fighter of the '60s and '70s cartoon series. Underdog's voice was supplied by Wally Cox.

Q. Please help me remember the name of the actor who played Mindy's father on "Mork & Mindy." He was short and bald and a jazz musician in real life. Whatever happened to him? — P.S., Mahan, N.J.

A. Conrad Janis played Mindy's (Pam Dawber) music-store owner dad, Fred McConnell. In real life, Janis doubles as an actor/jazz trombonist. Over the years, his various Dixieland bands have included Conrad Janis' Tailgate Band and the Beverly Hills Unlited Jazz Band.

Q. I've noticed that Cathy Turner, who won the short-track speed skating event in the Winter Olympics, is the same person as Lorrie Morgan, the country singer. Many have doubted me. Can you confirm my suspicion? She is pretty, fast and a good singer. Why would she use two names? — L.F., Webster City, Iowa.

A. Despite their resemblance, Turner and Morgan are two separate entities. The Celebrity Gossip

Olympic speed skater left the sport in 1980 to pursue a singing career, but came back strong four years later as the first Olympic champion in the short track event, and was a gold medalist this year in Lillehammer, Norway. She'll appear with fellow Olympian Tonya Harding this fall in a segment of "American Gladiators." Morgan, on the other hand, grew up in Nashville, the daughter of Grand Ole Opry star George Morgan. She spent her early years as a before becoming a star in her own right with his like "What Part of No?" and "Watch Me." Take a closer look at her Sept. 14 when she hosts "American Music" Shop" on The Nashville Network.

Q. Did Estelle Getty of "The Golden Girls" play the part of Danny DeVito's mother on "Taxi"? — A.O.B., Sefton, Fla.

A. No, but she often jokes she's played everyone's mother except Atila the Hun's. Getty became a star in the stage-production of "Torch Song Trilogy," playing the star's mother. She was Cher's mom in "Mask," Barry Manilow's in "Copacabana," Sylvester Stallone's in "Stop or My Mom Will Shoot" and, of course, Bea Arthur's mother, Sophie, in "Golden Girls." Louie DePalmer's (Danny DeVito) mother was played by the actor's real-life mom, Julia DeVito.

Q. I heard that Carol on "Growing Pains" had recovered from her illness. I would like to know if they are considering bringing the show back since Tracey Gold is doing better. I hope so! — E.P., Duncanville, Texas.

A. Gold, whose battle with anorexia has been widely reported, is planning to do a TV movie about anorexia for ABC. There seems to be little chance of a "Growing Pains" revival, though, since Kirk Cameron is committed to a new series.

Reptiles With Shells

All About Turtles

Freshwater turtles:

- live in freshwater ponds, rivers and marshes. Most turtles are of this kind.
- have webbed feet.
- have legs that are not as chunky as and flatter shells than those of land turtles.

The painted turtle is the type often sold in pet stores. Like most freshwater turtles, they have flatter shells.

Some turtles, like this African softshell, have soft shells. While most turtles have hard beaks, these have flesh similar to "lips" over their beaks. They have a long, tubelike nose they can stick above water for air.

The Mini Page thanks the Sea Turtle Restoration Project, Earth Island Institute; the New York Turtle and Tortoise Society; the National Zoological Park, Smithsonian Institution; the National Aquarium in Baltimore; and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

A very odd turtle

The matamora (MAT-uh-MAT-uh) is a very odd-looking freshwater turtle from South America.

Turtles:

- lay eggs with leathery or hard shells on land.
- are reptiles with shells.
- are cold-blooded.
- have lungs and breathe air.
- have bones.
- There are about 200 different kinds.

Sea turtles:

- live in the sea.
- have flippers and are fast swimmers.
- cannot pull their heads into their shells.

Land turtles:

- have thick legs.
- have dome-shaped shells.
- are also called tortoises.

Out comes a red-footed tortoise hatchling, or baby. Land turtles are also called tortoises.

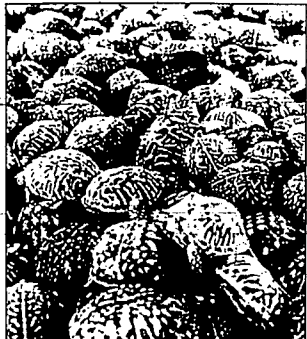

Terrapins:

- are water turtles that spend some of their time on land.

The diamondback terrapin is well-adjusted to life in brackish water (a mixture of freshwater from the land and salty ocean water).

Turtle Troubles and How to Help

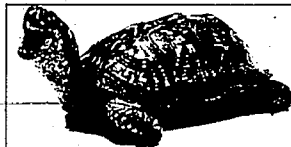

These box turtles are crowded together as they wait to be shipped overseas. Many will die on the way.

Turtle problems

Turtles — like many animals — are having a tough time.

We are destroying their habitat when we fill in their ponds and marshes to build shopping malls and new homes.

Many are killed by cars when they cross the road. They are also killed on lawns when people mow over them.

A box turtle

The top part of a turtle's shell is called the carapace (CARE-uh-pace).

The bottom part is called the plastron (PLAS-tron).

Box turtles can close their shells so tight that you couldn't squeeze a blade of grass between the top and bottom.

Box turtle troubles

If the American box turtle is lucky, it can grow to be 50 to 75 years old.

But not many are this lucky these days.

Thousands of these turtles are being shipped to Europe each year as pets. But they don't adjust well to the European climate.

Many people are working to put these turtles on an international list that will control this trade.

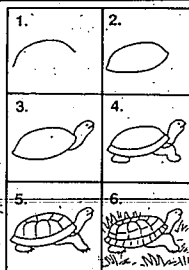

in the United States.

3. If you do have a turtle as a pet, remember that they are not living toys. Treat turtles with care!

What kids can do

1. Leaves turtles in the wild. Don't pick them up.

2. Don't buy baby turtles. Many grandparents can tell you about owning small, baby turtles when they were growing up.

Today, the sale of turtles under 4 inches is against the law in the United States.
